SHOWDOWN NEARS IN GEORGIA HOUSE ON COST SLASHES

Economy Investigators Prepare To Present Summary of Their Recommendations Today.

$932,940 SAVINGS, CUT IN JOBS URGED

Harris Seeks Final Vote On Sales and Luxury Tax Bills by Tomorrow.

By The Associated Press.
A showdown on economy in state government appeared in the making last night as members of a special investigating committee drafted a summary of recommendations to the house of representatives.

Decision of the probe committee to prepare a consolidated report followed closely a charge by Representative John C. Parker, of Colquitt, speaker pro tem., that the assembly had acted on only one of more than a score of recommendations for economy. The Moultrie legislator advocated adjournment of the assembly to permit completion of the governmental investigation and urged a 60-day extra session to carry out the economy suggestions.

James V. Carmichael, of Cobb, vice chairman of the investigating committee, made a similar suggestion on the floor of the house when the appropriations bill was under consideration, contending the assembly could not know how much revenue was necessary until the economy probe was complete.

Budget Tabled.
The house, sitting as a committee of the whole, later approved a proposed biennial budget calling for expenditure of $100,598,327.28, then tabled the measure pending consideration of revenue measures. These include a 3 per cent sales tax, estimated by Speaker Roy V. Harris as capable of raising $8,000,000; a 20 per cent luxury tax, estimated to raise $3,000,000 to $3,500,000; and a proposal to add an extra cent to the gasoline tax to raise about $3,000,000.

Harris seeks a final vote on the sales and luxury tax bills by tomorrow morning.
Carmichael said the committee's summary would be sent to the house by noon today, paving the way for possible discussion of economy measure before the appropriations bill again is taken from the table.

Would Abolish Jobs.
Unofficial tabulations of major recommendations of the economy committee, made from time to time, included:

1. Definite savings to the state totaling $932,940.
2. Suggestions for means of tightening up tax collections, eliminating "overlapping" of teachers' services, and establishment of an independent state purchasing agency—estimated capable of saving Georgia an aggregate of $2,000,000 annually.
3. Suggested outright abolition of 43 jobs, including four high-

A Happy Ending to Long Battle of Fulton Teacher

Marie Long started her fight to allow Fulton county teachers to marry just because she "thought it was right," but it came in handy for more personal reasons last night and she is now Mrs. J. R. DeLay. The picture shows the couple just after their wedding at the West End Baptist church.

COURT FIGHT WON, TEACHER MARRIES

Miss Marie Long, Champion of Wedded Women Educators, Is Bride.

By YOLANDE GWIN.

Miss Marie Long, who won a court fight to establish the right of Fulton county school teachers to marry and still hold their jobs, became a bride herself last night.

At the conclusion of the evening services at the West End Baptist church, Miss Long and J. R. DeLay, managing director of credit unions for Georgia and Florida, arose from their seats and walked down to the pulpit, where they were married by Dr. M. A. Cooper, pastor.

Last night, as the bride and groom fled from the church amid showers of rice, she declared again that she did not wage the court fight because of matrimony for herself.

"I didn't do it because I wanted to get married," she said. "I did it because I wanted to see if I could win."

Atlantan Arrested In Slaying Is Freed

An Atlanta man who was arrested Saturday in connection with a murder in Forsyth county in January, 1933, was released from custody yesterday after he had convinced the victim's brother that it was a case of mistaken identity, police reported.

The suspect gave his name as Benjamin Franklin Helton, 60, of a Woodward avenue address. Police said he was arrested at the request of D. O. Gravitt, 54, of 952 Glen Arden way, N. E., who said he believed him to be Frank Bagley, named in a murder warrant issued just after the killing of Gravitt's brother, Tom.

Helton protested his innocence and asserted he had never been in Forsyth county, but said he did not blame Gravitt for trying to avenge the slaying.

Leaders of Medical Profession in America Gather for Conferences Here

1,000 EXPECTED TO 'FRESHEN UP' UPON ADVANCES

Between 300 and 400 Informally Meet at Home of Dr. Davison on Eve of 3-Day Conference.

WILL SEE LATEST USES OF SCALPEL

Telephone Described as 'By Product' of Device To Improve Hearing.

By LEE FUHRMAN.
Medical men who will hear and present lectures on new uses of the surgeon's knife—to correct ailments ranging from insanity to arthritis—assembled in Atlanta yesterday for the opening this morning of the 10th annual Southeastern Surgical Congress.

The group, including educators, diagnosticians, clinicians and surgeons from every part of the country and from Canada, will attend a three-day meeting, termed a "refresher" course in surgery, at the Biltmore hotel.

As a prelude to the sessions, at which lectures and demonstrations will be given by 40 of the nation's medical leaders, between 300 and 400 physicians and surgeons met informally from 5 to 7 o'clock yesterday at the home of Dr. T. C. Davison, now closing his year as head of the congress, and Mrs. Davison, at 1414 Lanier place, N. E.

No Stethoscopes.

While the Open House at the Davison home was principally a social affair, the "men in white"—dressed in business clothes, and with no stethoscopes or other identifying marks protruding from pockets—talked informally, and interestingly, on medical subjects.

One of these was a distinguished out-of-towner, Dr. Austin A. Hayden, of Chicago, director of the American Association for the Hard of Hearing and director of the department of oto-laryngology of St. Joseph hospital, who will present a paper Tuesday afternoon on "Hearing Aids—Old and New."

"It is a well-known fact, and yet, paradoxical as it may seem, a little known-fact," said Dr. Hayden, "that the invention of the telephone can be traced directly to a hearing aid device which Alexander Graham Bell invented for his wife."

"This was merely a simple carbon transmitter and receiver, made in 1875. It was about a year later that Bell, whose hearing aid for his wife had set him thinking on the telephone idea, invented the telephone."

"The development of hearing aids progressed little until 1922, when the device was changed to a self-retaining ear tip. This was a

ROOSEVELT CALLS LABOR CONFEREES TO WHITE HOUSE

First Peace Meeting To Be Held Tuesday Afternoon, With President Participating in Talks.

LITTLE HOPE HELD FOR AN AGREEMENT

Lengthy Negotiations, Truce as Outcome Is Limit of Expectations.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(UP)—President Roosevelt tonight called representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations to meet at the White House at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday to begin conferences designed to bring peace in their three-year struggle for supremacy.

Mr. Roosevelt will participate in the meeting as will Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. He is expected to reiterate the appeal he made a week ago to CIO President John L. Lewis and Federation President William Green—that the warring labor factions sign a peace pact and unify under one banner for the common good of the people and the country.

List of Negotiators.

The six men chosen by Green and Lewis to conduct the momentous negotiations are:

for the AFL: Vice Presidents Matthew Woll, Thomas A. Rickert and Harry C. Bates.

For the CIO: Lewis, and Vice Presidents Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray.

Serious obstacles—including those of dual unionism and an AFL-CIO fight over whether any changes should be made in the Wagner labor relations act—loomed on the eve of the conference.

Persons close to the rival labor chieftains are not optimistic over the prospects for a settlement that will reunite the groups. Some think a truce will be the limit of achievement. Some even throw cold water on this idea.

Lengthy Talks.

It is believed that negotiations will be lengthy because of the many and serious problems confronting the conferees.

The parleys may be forced to suspend soon after they begin because Lewis and Murray, who are president and vice president, respectively, of the United Mine Workers of America, face important collective bargaining conferences beginning March 14. The basic Appalachian bituminous contract covering more than 300,000 miners expires March 31 and the anthracite wage contract covering approximately 100,000 Pennsylvania hard coal miners expires April 30. Both meetings will be held in New York.

Seven-Man Council, Set Up To Direct Loyalist Operations, Asks Guarantees as Peace Basis.

Insurgent Sympathizers Revolt at Cartagena, Chase Ships Out to Sea.

MADRID (Monday), March 6.—(UP)—The Loyalist regime of Premier Juan Negrin was overthrown shortly before midnight in a military coup d'etat after army chieftains said they had learned that the 47-year-old premier and his ministers were preparing to flee the country.

The army generals were believed to have obtained information that Negrin was negotiating with Loyalist refugees in France on terms of surrender.

The military immediately established a seven-man national defense council under General Segismundo Casado, commander in the Madrid zone who announced by radio that an armistice would be accepted providing the Loyalists received assurances that there would be no reprisals and no foreign domination of the country.

Prelude to Surrender?

(Establishment of the military junta was interpreted in London as a prelude to Loyalist surrender, inasmuch as the Communists, who have insisted upon continued resistance, are not represented and Casado is reported to favor peace under suitable insurgent guarantees. The insurgent headquarters at Burgos also believed that Casado and Besteiro would negotiate for an armistice.)

The army leader placed representatives of all major political parties on the new council. They said the army would prevent Negrin and his ministers from fleeing abroad.

This indicated that Negrin and some of his cabinet ministers might be under arrest somewhere in the Madrid-Valencia zone.

Negrin, accused of having been "a traitor to his promises to the people and a perjurer," had been premier since May 18, 1937.

'Lost World' Is Discovered

American Comes Upon Idyllic Village Near Conan Doyle's Famed Habitat of the 'Monsters.'

By HOWARD W. BLAKELEE, SCHENECTADY, N. Y., March 5.—(AP)—Discovery on the slopes bordering Conan Doyle's Lost World of a lost village where perfect happiness exists was announced today at Union College. The village lies in a huge gorge, nearly half a mile above sea level but still more than a mile below the flat summit of Mt. Roraima, British Guiana and Venezuela, which was Doyle's famed site of throwbacks of the earth's earlier days. It was located a few weeks ago by Dr. Paul A. Zahl, research associate of the Haskins laboratory in Union College, who returned last week.

"Monsters" Found. His expedition also found the first authentic lost world "monsters." They are only ants, but they are two inches long, the largest on earth. In the lost world they are called "fourstings" from the belief that four stings at one time bring death.

Finally, Dr. Zahl reported discovery near Roraima's mists of two waterfalls, each estimated at about 10 times the drop of Niagara.

It was the first, and highest of these waterfalls, that led to the lost village. The explorer's attention was attracted by a column of mist rising persistently above jungle carpeting a plateau that spreads comparatively flat 50 miles out from Roraima's base.

He traced this mist to the lip of an uncharted gorge, that dropped down in the midst of the jungle. Over the edge of the gorge the Uitsi river, in the dry season a stream 200 feet wide, plunged 1,200 to 1,600 feet, all

Would-Be Burglar Pays 'Cost of Crime'

A would-be burglar checked up short just one bicycle yesterday in what apparently was an attempt to rob the home of F. G. Moore, of 1281 Memorial drive, S. E.

Awakened by the intruder, Mr. Moore reached for his gun and fired in his general direction. The man fled, making his escape through a window.

Later a newsboy reported he had seen a negro ride up to the house on a bicycle. The bicycle was found parked on the sidewalk and taken to police headquarters.

estimates indicating the latter. He named the place the George VI falls. While exploring the gorge he came upon an Indian village, about three miles below the falls.

His guides, and the inhabitants, told him these people had never before been visited by white men.

Idyllic Life. The Indians were aboriginal. Yet the life impressed Dr. Zahl as so idyllic that he remained a week. He found "practically perfect" human relations among them.

He said he never noticed a sign of anger, only laughter and general happiness. His photographs, particularly a family group, bear out this spirit.

Dr. Zahl said these Indians were a great contrast to those found near white settlements or mission contacts. With whites showed marked development of the weaker traits of the white race, such as jealousy, treachery and anger.

The aboriginal told him of a second fall, another three miles downstream. They said they had never seen these falls because they feared them.

Dr. Zahl soon learned why. As his party approached within a mile, the gorge narrowed, heavy mist drenched the explorers and the roar of the waters rose so that Dr. Zahl said he could believe the expression "too noisy to think."

There was adventure almost every hour of the way from the moment Dr. Zahl left the coast bound for Mount Roraima foothills, in a seaplane piloted by Art Williams. In three hours the plane covered 250 miles that have taken other expeditions six weeks.

Through low-lying clouds the plane followed the course of the Mazaruni river.

Standed on Sandbar. Within 50 miles of Roraima increasing frequency of cascades disclosed the last possible stretch on which to set the plane down.

The landing put him and a companion, G. T. Chislett, former member of the Brazilian-British Guiana Boundary Commission, on a sandbar in midriver with no immediate means of getting ashore. The plane then flew off to drop a note asking for aid to be sent from a near-by mission.

Night came before aid. In the morning Dr. Zahl awoke with the river rising due to torrential rain and the water lapping at tent flaps. He and Chislett were preparing to swim when an Indian rescue party appeared in canoes.

The next 50 miles took six weeks of hiking. While feeling his way over a slippery ledge leading to one of the new waterfalls, Dr. Zahl almost stepped on an eight-foot bushmaster. The reptile was coiled, ready to strike.

Just beyond it was a sheer drop of about 1,000 feet. Dr. Zahl's only choice was to "freeze" his position, foot in the air. He then slowly withdrew without exciting the bushmaster into a lunge.

Capture of the huge ant, Dinoponera Grandis, was accomplished with something like military tactics. These ants are beasts of prey. They steal the larvae of other insects and carry them back to well concealed underground nests.

SMITH COTTON BILL URGED TO FARMERS

President of Co-operative Association Would Release U. S. Loan Staple.

NEW ORLEANS, March 5.—(AP) Norris C. Williamson, of Lake Providence, La., president of the American Cotton Co-operative Association, in a statement released from Washington, tonight called upon farmers of the south to support enactment of the cotton bill proposed by Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina.

The measure would authorize release of some of the government loan stock cotton, now 11,200,000 bales, into market channels to relieve an apparently developing shortage. It also would provide benefit payments to growers who kept 1939 cotton out of loan stocks.

Williamson has been appearing before congressional committees the interest of legislation amending the present cotton program.

In his statement he asked southern farmers to support leaders of various farm organizations in an effort to "change the direction of the cotton program in America, and second, to see that congress provides necessary funds to maintain cotton income while American farmers get out from under the huge surplus of cotton now held in the government loan."

Williamson said the Smith bill, up before the senate agriculture committee Thursday for final disposition, "contains all the recommendations of the cotton conference held in Washington, January 6 to 9, the only exception being farmers must pay 3 cents per pound for cotton accepted in lieu of production this year."

forager to the colony's door. This was usually a small, inconspicuous hole, hidden near a sapling, which Dr. Zahl would dig with an axe. At this vibration ants would pile out of the hole. They would scatter belligerently in all directions, as if hunting an intruder.

The scientist says they are near-sighted and that by stepping back about 10 feet he rendered them blind until they became quiet. Then as the ants walked back to their nest, he would wait at the hole with a pair of forceps and a flask.

By these tactics he got 2,000 Dinoponera Grandis, and only one bite. It was a sting on the leg which partially paralyzed the limb for nearly two hours and was very painful.

He collected also another 2,000 of smaller ants, up to an inch long, of the species Ponera. All 4,000 came back with him on the steamer Lady Hawkins, housed in glass bottles. The change in climate at sea caused many to die.

Beginning January 1, 1788, the Governor's salary was fixed at 1,000 deer skins. That of the chief justice was 500.

SENATORS DROP FIGHT FOR GUAM

Administration Leaders Act To Quiet Storm Over Foreign Policies.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP) Administration leaders, seeking to quiet the senate storm over foreign policy, decided today to eliminate the controversial issue of improvements at Guam from the $552,000,000 defense program being speeded through congress.

Chairman Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, of the senate naval committee, said that in his judgment there was no pressing need for the proposed harbor improvements at this tiny Pacific possession which is virtually surrounded by Japanese mandated islands.

He added: "In view of the division of sentiment in the country, and the suggestion that the fortification of Guam would be a war threat it should not be pressed at this time."

(President Roosevelt meets with his congressional lieutenants tomorrow to determine the status of national defense legislation and to press for speedy passage of the bill to "change the direction of the cotton program in America, which thus far has been held up by senatorial critics of administration foreign policy, the United Press reported.)

The administration proposed expenditure of $500,000 for sea-plane lanes and other harbor development at Guam. High naval officials said this would be in no sense fortification of the island, but some critics contended it would be a step in that direction.

The house bill, which eliminated the Guam item from $53,000,000 naval air base measure after hearing that Japan might consider it a provocative step. The senate naval committee then voted to take up its own bill with Guam in it, but the administration made it clear the administration would make no fight for the item.

It because I thought it was right." At the West End church, on Lee street near the intersection of Gordon, throngs of worshippers filed into the church for the Sunday night service, unaware that a wedding ceremony would climax it.

All the pews were filled and according to D. Lee Stovall, one of the ushers, few of the regular congregation knew of any planned departure from the regular service.

I began to wonder, when I saw so many of her friends coming into church tonight, that people who were not regular worshippers here. Then when some of her friends came in and placed two big baskets of calla lilies up near the platform, I wondered more.

I knew something was going to happen when Miss Marie came in all dressed up in that pink dress and all those orchids on."

Began Fight in 1937. The "pink" dress, however, was an ash of roses crepe. The bride and groom sat in the last pew in the front section of the church during the regular Sunday night services as Dr. Cooper gave his sermon on "Steps Into a Life of Blessing."

Following the benediction, he announced the marriage would take place, and asked that the young couple come forward.

They were unattended, and after the brief ceremony left the church by the front entrance and ran to their car.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Long, of 835 Zachry street, and has been a teacher in the Fulton county system for 13 years. She is now assigned to the College Street school. Delany lives at 451 Peachtree street.

Last night's bride first broke into the news in the early fall of 1937 when she filed an injunction against the Fulton County Board of Education contesting the board's ruling that marriage automatically ousts any teacher. At the time she was granted a temporary restraining order preventing the board from dropping her from the school pay roll for failure to sign the contract to marry.

She refused to sign and Miss Sue Hackett, of the Warsaw school, was assigned her post. At that time Miss Long said she had no intention of marrying. Last March the former Miss Long filed a mandamus in Fulton county superior court seeking to force the school board to pay her $900 salary for the preceding six months. Wells, and the school board were named as defendants. She set forth then that she had been a teacher for 13 years and that she had been replaced "without legal warrant or authority." In addition to seeking her back salary, she asked that she be paid until her connection "is legally terminated."

September 15 the Georgia supreme court ruled that teachers of the Fulton county school system who have been employed three years prior to July, 1937, when the civil service act became effective, are not required to sign contracts since they are under civil service.

device that did not have to be held by the hard-of-hearing person. The booster amplifier or battery—came in 1924, and then, in 1932, the bone oscillator, the attachment which, placed to the mastoid bone, enabled one to hear.

Warning up to his subject, Dr. Hayden pointed out that cupping a hand over the ear is "the oldest and most universal hearing device."

"Most persons don't realize it," he continued, "but this simple act sets up five decibels of amplification."

A decibel, he explained, is the smallest difference in sound intensity detectable by the human ear.

This is noted in the picking up of the ears by a mule or a horse, or a dog catching an ear of corn. It happens when the animal desires to hear better than ever, to apprehend danger, for instance."

Several Divisions. Dr. Hayden also pointed out that hearing loss comes within certain classifications.

"There are persons who have had hearing up to the age of eight years, then there are the deaf, the persons who were born with hearing before the age of eight."

"It is neither right nor fair to use, in the case of deaf mutes, the expression deaf and dumb. Dumb connotes a dumb bell or a dumb person, not the deaf, or the deaf who are not impaired mentally, there is nothing wrong with their thinking apparatus."

"Speech habits do not become firmly fixed until the age of 8. The average person talks well because he hears himself talk, and hearing oneself talk is absolutely essential to proper speech, just as vision is essential to movement."

"The groping movement of the unsighted is an example of what I mean here. The unsighted person's movements are stilted and unnatural."

10,000,000 Deafened. Launching into a few figures, Dr. Hayden went on: "There are about ten million deafened persons in this country. These run the range from the person who seeks a front seat in a theater to be able to hear well to the man at whom others must shout if he is to be heard."

"The deaf, that is, those born without hearing or who lose it before the age of 8, total about 100,000 in this country."

"The blind-deaf, those totally blind or totally deaf up to the age of 8, number about 1,000. Helen Keller is perhaps the most well known in this group."

"On the seeing side, however, the vision side, there are about 30 million persons in the United States who can be compared to the ten million deafened. The other categories, totally blind and deaf-blind, correspond to the other classifications."

Asked about the most common cause of hearing loss, Dr. Hayden said:

"After the age of 40, it is a fixation of the small bones of the middle ear. Technically, otosclerosis. Before the age of 40—head colds, sore throat and the obstructed nose, or infections and inflammations of the upper respiratory organs bring it about."

Drugs Blamed. Some drugs, he has been lately found, Dr. Hayden said, cause hearing loss.

"Dr. H. Marshall Taylor, of Jacksonville, has shown that considerable hearing loss is laid to quinine. Most persons who have taken quinine are familiar with a ringing in the ears after taking it."

"Dr. S. J. Crowe, of Johns Hopkins."

Belle Hepburn Stopped in Car As 'Too Young'

WILMINGTON, Del., March 5. (UP)—Katharine Hepburn, stage and screen actress, was arrested today by a state trooper at suburban Gordon Heights "because she looked too young to drive a car" and posted a $13.50 bond pending a hearing on charges of driving without a license.

Miss Hepburn was driving from Philadelphia to Washington, accompanied by two women and a man, when she was halted by State Trooper Joseph Shannon. She failed to produce a driver's license, he said, and was released pending a further hearing.

"I saw her driving past and she looked like a little girl," Shannon said. "I stopped her because she looked too young to drive a car."

Miss Hepburn, arraigned before Magistrate James Seltz, allegedly said she had left her license in Hollywood.

"She told us she was Katharine Hepburn," Magistrate Seltz said, and then posted $13.50 bond after I told her she would be notified when to come back to display her license. The $13.50 would be the amount of the fine for driving without a license and it will be forfeited if she doesn't appear."

SHOWDOWN NEARS IN GEORGIA HOUSE

salaries executives. The committee's investigation has consumed 33 working days thus far, and Carmichael recently estimated the probe—if carried to an effective conclusion—would extend well past the March 18 deadline for the present regular session of the assembly. Headed by Chairman Wilmer Lanier, of Richmond, the group has investigated charges of excessive administrative costs in the welfare and education departments, nepotism (employment of relatives) in the public health department, and extravagance in operation of other state departments. It has yet to complete its investigation of the highway department, the university system, the agricultural department and minor statehouse divisions.

Spectacular charges developed in the investigation of asphalt sales to the state highway, culminating in an assertion by Carmichael during the hearing that evidence indicated four companies represented by Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, had enjoyed a "corner or monopoly" on sales of emulsified asphalt to the state.

Late last week the committee instructed Attorney General Ellis Arnall to prepare amendments to the present state law to prohibit bidders from representing more than one company.

Guests included such well known medical men as Dr. Ambrose L. Lockwood, of Toronto, Can.; director of surgery of the Lockwood clinic; Dr. R. L. Sanders, of Memphis, president-elect of the congress; Dr. George Gray Ward, of New York, one of the nation's leading surgeons, and Dr. Austin A. Hayden, of Chicago, director of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing and director of the department of otolaryngology of St. Joseph hospital.

Another prominent out-of-town-er was Dr. Grover C. Penberthy, of Detroit, professor of clinical surgery at Wayne University Medical school.

In the receiving line yesterday were Dr. Davidson, Dr. Sanders, Dr. Elmer L. Henderson, of Louisville, Ky., vice president of the congress; Dr. B. T. Beasley, of Atlanta, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Frank K. Boland, of Atlanta, general chairman.

The gathering at the open house yesterday at the Davidson home represented a part of the 1,000 medical men who are expected to attend the sessions, many of whom are not due to arrive in this city until today.

These included not only men who will hear the lectures, but many of the outstanding men who will deliver lectures and give demonstrations, because, as Dr. Davidson explained, "advances in medicine and surgery are developing so fast that physicians must go back to school frequently to keep abreast of the times."

He Finds Hold-Up Gun By Using North Pole. SURING, Wis., March 5.—Undersheriff Allen Groose is a man of rare resourcefulness. An oil station was held up by a man using a sawed-off shotgun. When the bandit's automobile was found abandoned, Groose figured the gun should be nearby. Compass in hand, he walked through the snow. When the needle wavered, Groose dug. And there, under two feet of snow, was the shotgun.

Hearn Band To Play at Home Show

Well-Known Atlanta Orchestra To Provide Entertainment at Event Opening on March 13.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.

Sweet music and high-class entertainment will add to the spectacular, new and different home show which opens at the city auditorium March 13 for one week.

Each afternoon and night at The Constitution's "House of Progress Exposition" Harry Hearn and his 11-piece orchestra will entertain visitors at the superb showing of the 101 things necessary for an ideal home.

Harry Hearn's orchestra is one of the most popular musical organizations in this section. It has won popularity contests as "best swing band," as "best sweet band" and as "best all-around band."

Featured with the orchestra at the home show will be the voices of Betty Raines, Ken Reese and Tiny "Casey Jones" Scarborough and presentations by a rumba band and a Dixieland jazz band, featured by Hearn and his boys.

Hearn's orchestra has proven its popularity in the past with long engagements at leading local hotels. It was the only southern orchestra picked up on NBC network during the President's birthday dance. It has appeared in a large number of radio broadcasts throughout the country. It has been the orchestra to furnish the music at both inaugural dances of Governor Rivers, and was the selection from Georgia to play for President Roosevelt's private party at Warm Springs this past Thanksgiving.

It would appear that Harry Hearn's orchestra is Atlanta's official convention orchestra, judging from the fact that it has just finished its 96th large convention engagement in Atlanta.

HITCH-HIKER HELD ON THEFT CHARGE

Truck Driver Claims He Took $150, Automatic.

A hitch-hiker who gave his name as Bill Murray, 38, of Pickensville, Ky., was arrested on charges of larceny and carrying concealed weapons yesterday after a truck driver pointed him out to Officer S. I. Belcher.

The driver, M. J. Western, of Canton, Ga., said he picked Murray up yesterday morning en route to Atlanta. They stopped for gas at Stewart avenue and Glen street. While he was out of the cab, Western reported, Murray took $150 and a .45-caliber automatic and fled.

Western then trailed him to Five Points, where Belcher arrested him. A search disclosed an automatic but no trace of the money, officers said.

CLOUDY, RAIN AGAIN FORECAST FOR TODAY

Overcast skies and occasional showers are in prospect for the Atlanta area today, the Candler Field weather bureau predicted last night.

Temperatures will be somewhat lower, officials said, but no severe cold is expected. The temperature yesterday was from a minimum of 44 to a maximum of 78 degrees. The minimum forecast for this morning is 40.

NEGRIN IS OUSTED ON TRAITOR CHARGE

the defense council, announced that "we will fight to the death unless our independence is assured."

Casado told the people by radio that "the die is cast—we must remain on a war footing until we receive a guarantee of peace insuring the independence of Spain and avoiding reprisals."

"We are not fighting from our own will. We want a country free of imperialistic ambitions."

Appeal to "Rebels."

Then Casado made a radio appeal to the Spanish Nationalists, addressing them:

"In your hands, not ours, is the peace necessary for Spain to recover from the bloody war which is weakening it and placing it in the service of invaders. Choose. If you offer us peace you will find generous Spanish hearts. If you continue to make war against us, and against yourselves, you will meet opposition and the mettle of our combatants which is as strong and implacable as the steel of our bayonets. Either peace for Spain or a fight to the death—we are ready for either. We are independent and free Spaniards who have not on our conscience responsibility for the destruction of our country."

The radio blared through the night with the speeches of the new leaders.

Republic "Beheaded."

Legally, they contended, the Negre government had no right to power. They said that the recent resignation of President Manuel Azana, now a refugee in France, left the republic "beheaded."

Only a few hours before midnight Negrin had established himself as virtual dictator over the nine provinces and 8,000,000 people of the central zone by removing General Jose Miaja as generalissimo of all land, sea and air forces. The scholar-premier then assumed supreme military and political authority.

As the coup d'etat was staged

Republican military forces reported the suppression of a revolt at the Loyalist naval base of Cartagena where insurgent sympathizers seized public buildings in bloody street fighting and attempted to capture the Republican fleet in the harbor.

Casado and Juan Besteiro, named to leadership of the seven-man national defense council, announced by radio to the Loyalist population that the army was in power and would prevent Negrin and his cabinet ministers from fleeing abroad.

General Casado recently was named commander of the Loyalist forces in and around Madrid when Miaja was promoted to supreme generalissimo, shortly after the fall of Barcelona on January 26.

Besteiro is a Socialist leader. "The time has come to proclaim the truth to the country," Casado announced. "We will no longer stand for the Negre government's lack of organization and its mismanagement."

"His crowd want to keep the title of rulers and do nothing. They accepted everything in Catalonia and they submitted to everything. That cannot continue. 'Whereas, on one hand, bitter resistance was demanded of the people, the government chiefs were only thinking of fleeing abroad.'"

The announcement said that, under the new military government, "nobody will escape his duty and his promises."

Casado, who served under Miaja during the long insurgent siege of Madrid, will direct 400,000 Loyalist troops of the central zone in continued resistance against Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgents who outnumber them nearly two to one.

(Frontier reports at Hendaye said Franco was preparing to serve a final ultimatum on the Loyalists, fixing a time limit for them to choose between continued resistance and surrender. If the Loyalists chose to fight, it was said, Franco will throw the most powerful war machine of the entire civil war against Madrid.)

In addition to Casado and Besteiro, the members of the Republican national defense council are: Venceslao Carrillo, Miguel Saenz, Eduardo Val, Manuel Gonzalez Marin and Vincent Cipriano Medi.

Casado and Besteiro said that, juridically, the Negre government lacked a legal basis for existence and was without authority to "direct the Spanish people like Spaniards."

"We affirm we are the defenders of the Spanish people," Casado said by radio. "We are not making phrases. We warn that we will not tolerate desertions and no man who has a duty to defend Spain will be allowed to flee and escape abroad."

The manifesto of the council concluded with:

"We demand your Spanish co-operation and we shall be inexorable against those failing in their duty."

Negrin was to have broadcast at 10 o'clock tonight from "somewhere near Madrid" to explain the reasons why he assumed dictatorial powers.

Cipriano Medi, anarchist member of the council, called on "all workers and anti-Fascists" to support the new military administration which, he said, was established because of the "absurd inactivity, personal policy of failure and lack of guidance" of the Negre regime.

Each of the important political parties was represented on the defense council.

"We cannot rely on men who still call themselves the government of Spain but in whom nobody believes or trusts," the manifesto said.

"While the people in arms are sacrificing their lives these members of the government have abandoned their posts and fled in cowardly order to save their own lives, even at the cost of their dignity."

"This cannot be permitted and cannot be repeated. While asking for further resistance some of these privileged ones have been preparing to flee abroad."

The national defense council said it had "picked up power from the ditch where Negre abandoned it."

The military and political leaders charged that Negrin and his cabinet ministers, instead of remaining in Madrid to carry on the resistance which they called for on the part of the people, fled to a refuge near the Mediterranean coast.

Negrin Blocked.

Negrin's previous attempt to assume dictatorial powers (perhaps in anticipation of a military coup d'etat) was reported to have been blocked by leaders of the Spanish cortes (parliament), now in Paris, to replace him with a leader agreeable to an armistice.

His first move in asserting dictatorial powers was to remove General Miaja from supreme command of all the Republican defense forces. Miaja, the "savior of Madrid," was given the supreme command after the fall of Barcelona.

Negrin distributed official circulars announcing that henceforth he would direct all military operations through the general staff. He appointed General Manuel Metalana Gomez, commander of the Madrid front, to the rank of chief of state.

Miaja was understood to have been removed because of his assertion that the Loyalists were doomed to early defeat if they chose to carry on resistance against Franco's 800,000 troops who are drawing a circle of steel around Madrid.

The Cartagena revolt, which Loyalists said was crushed during Sunday afternoon, started when Loyalist sailors, soldiers and civilians suddenly appeared in the streets about 9 a. m., occupied the government radio station and broadcast an appeal to insurgent warships to come to their aid.

The revolt was led by "Fascist elements within the military," it was announced here.

(Insurgent radio stations said the warships of the Loyalist fleet, imprisoned in Cartagena harbor for months by Franco's Mediterranean blockade, had escaped into the Mediterranean and had "taken refuge abroad.")

After hoisting the red-gold insurgent flag over several buildings, the rebels ordered the Loyalist warships to surrender or flee into the Mediterranean within 15 minutes under threat of being blown out of the harbor.

Court-martials were ordered to deal immediately with the leaders of the revolt, many of whom were arrested.

LOYALIST PLANES USED FOR ESCAPE

ORAN, Algeria, March 5.—(AP) Four Spanish Republican planes landed today in French-ruled Algeria with 30 Spanish officers and men reported involved in a revolt at Cartagena, Republican naval base.

They were disarmed and placed under guard by French military authorities who made no immediate announcement concerning their story.

Three of the planes landed at La Senia bay took off again before authorities could take its seven occupants into custody. However, it was forced down at nearby Saïda Du Kiss by fuel shortage and they were quickly disarmed.

ARAB IS SLAIN NAZI CONFESSION

VATICAN Non-Italian Official?

VATICAN CITY, March 5.—(UP)—Pope Pius XII is studying the advisability of appointing a non-Italian cardinal to succeed him as Vatican secretary of state as a means of reducing Italian influence over the church's policies, well-informed prelates said tonight.

This group, although admitting that Luigi Cardinal Maglione appears to be the outstanding candidate for the office, second in importance only to the papacy itself, insisted that the new Pontiff was giving thoughtful consideration to a number of foreign cardinals.

Cardinal Maglione, prefect of the sacred congregation of the council and an outstanding diplomat, were to occupy the post vacated by Pius XII, his appointment would have been announced by now, these prelates contended.

They pointed out that Pius XII, as secretary of state under the late Pius XI, frequently expressed hope for larger non-Italian participation in running the affairs of the church, due largely to increasing agitation by foreign Catholics anxious for a greater voice in ecclesiastical councils and for a reduction in Italian influence upon the Vatican's policies.

ITALY Afraid of Bluff

ROME, March 5.—(AP)—A flat charge that the great democracies were preparing to start a war shortly to destroy the totalitarian states was made today by Virginia Gayda, editor who often reflects Premier Mussolini's thoughts.

Britain's huge expenditure for her army, Gayda continued, "announces the firm intention of England to transfer herself to the continent with land forces."

He said events had confirmed his previous expressed suspicions that British Prime Minister Chamberlain's formula of "peace by negotiation" rapidly was changing to one of "peace with intimidation."

"One may be certain," he continued, "that within a few months, when war warehouses are filled, the British tune will change and round, with the melodious flute of peace."

The editor said the democracies first based their arms programs on the alleged menace of the totalitarian states.

But now, he asserted, with the confident turn of their new armed strength they were preparing to greet demands of justice and equality, which Italy or Germany might make, as "an insupportable surprise."

Some diplomats thought Gayda's attack might be the opening salvo of a campaign by Premier Mussolini to satisfy Italy's "natural aspirations" and might be followed shortly by presentation of demands on France.

One-Day Queen?

ROME, March 6.—(Monday)—(UP)—Princess Maria, of Austria, gave birth to a daughter at 3:25 a. m. today at the Anglo-American clinic. Both were doing well.

Her husband, Don Juan, son of former King Alfonso XIII of Spain, and who might occupy the Spanish throne in event of a restoration of the monarchy by Generalissimo Francisco Franco, was present. Alfonso and his former Queen, at present living in Rome, were notified immediately.

FRANCE Munich Aftermath

PARIS, March 5.—(AP)—A young French naval ensign, condemned to die before the firing squad at dawn tomorrow for betraying military secrets during the September war crisis, paced his cell at Toulon tonight, muttering prayers.

Twenty-five-year-old Marc Aubert, who wore the natty uniform of an officer aboard the destroyer Vauquelin at the time of his arrest, presented a contrasting picture in ill-fitting civilian clothes on the eve of his execution.

His jailer said he has refused to wash or shave for more than a month.

Not far from the prison where the condemned man waited for the firing squad his accomplice and friend, Marie Morel, slept in a cell in the woman's prison to which she was sentenced for three years.

The woman, who received letters from Aubert containing military secrets, did not know that he was to die at dawn.

Aubert will be the first man to be executed by a naval firing squad at Toulon, France's largest naval base, since 1911.

RUSSIA Russian Army

MOSCOW, March 5.—(AP)—Pravda, Communist party organ, today published German figures giving the peace-time strength of the Soviet Russian army as 1,800,000 men.

The figures were taken from a German military magazine but the fact that they were published here without comment indicated that the Soviet government was not unwilling to have Russian and foreigners take them seriously.

The same tabulation also showed an increase in Soviet air strength from 6,000 to 9,000 warplanes between 1936 and 1938.

It credited the Soviet Union with 30,000 light machine guns and between 6,000 and 10,000 tanks.

The last official Russian figures, issued several years ago, gave the Red army's peace-time strength at 1,300,000 and merely listed "thousands of airplanes and tanks."

TUNISIA Urgent Conference

TUNIS, Tunisia, March 5.—(AP) The resident generals of French-ruled Tunisia and Morocco conferred behind closed doors here today with six generals and an admiral on French North African defense.

General August Nogues, resident-general of Morocco and co-ordinator of French African forces,

GENERAL NOGUES. Come in a Hurry

called the conference shortly after his arrival for an inspection of southern Tunisian fortifications facing Italian Libya.

The importance of the conference was emphasized by General Nogues' swift movements.

After conferring with Premier Daladier and the war ministry in Paris he left the French capital late last night for Marseille by train.

From Marseille he flew this morning to Algiers where he conferred with Governor General Georges Le Beau, governor general of Algeria.

Immediately afterwards he flew in his own plane to Tunis with his military aide, General Alfonso Juin.

Instead of calling on the bey of Tunis, the usual custom of an official of General Nogues' rank, he sent his card to the bey's palace and went into conference with Erik Labonne, resident-general in Tunisia.

After lunch they met with regular army and navy officers charged with maintaining the North African defenses, including General Amedee Blanc, Tunisian minister of war, and Admiral Charles Bliery, commander of French naval forces in Tunisian waters.

It was announced that Labonne, for the first time since his appointment as resident-general last October 22, would make an inspection tour of southern Tunisia. He will make a three-day tour beginning tomorrow, separate from that of General Nogues.

INDIA Gandhi and Wife

RAJKOT, India, March 5.—(AP) Mohandas K. Gandhi ordered his wife back to prison today although he was weakening rapidly as he closed the third day of his "fast unto death" to win a voice in the government for the people of the tiny state of Rajkot.

The nationalist leader's move was a new act of defiance against the native ruler of Rajkot, Thakore Sahab Shri Dharmendrasinhji, who had freed Mrs. Gandhi from jail but still refused Gandhi's demands for constitutional reform.

Kasturibhai Gandhi, who is known as a "faithful, silent" watcher over her husband, was arrested February 3 when she arrived in Rajkot to start a civil disobedience campaign.

Gandhi's verdict was that she should rejoin others still imprisoned.

POLAND New Jewish Problem

WARSAW, March 5.—(AP)—Joint action by Poland and Rumania to urge the colonial powers to take their large Jewish populations were understood to have been discussed today by the foreign ministers of the two nations.

The foreign ministers, Joseph Beck, of Poland, and Grigore Gafencu, of Rumania, who arrived here yesterday, held their conversations between official functions for the visitor.

Their talks also were said to have revolved about proposals for a common frontier between Poland and Hungary by cession to the latter of Czechoslovakia's easternmost province, Carpatho-Ukraine, and for the building of a Vistula-Danube canal.

PALESTINE Arab Assassination

JERUSALEM, March 5.—(AP)—Adnan Nashashibi, nephew of Ragheb Bey Nashashibi, leader of the Arab national defense family, died today of wounds suffered when he was shot by an Arab at Herod's Gate, near the old city of Jerusalem, yesterday.

The attack was the fifth in three months on members of the influential family, considered moderates as opposed to the strongly anti-British following of the exiled Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin Effendi Al Husseini.

Adnan Nashashibi was closely associated with the opposition to the Grand Mufti and his assassination was regarded as a new sign of internal Arab political dissension.

near Acre, at the Lebanese frontier, today in a clash which followed the explosion of a land mine under a car filled with Jewish workmen. One of the workmen was injured seriously and two others were hurt slightly.

Jewish leaders meanwhile took further steps to mobilize public sentiment in anticipation of an unfavorable decision at the London peace conference on Palestine.

The Arab leaders and press likewise encouraged their following to put up a solid front.

GERMANY Critics' Answer

LEIPZIG, Germany, March 5.—(UP)—Opening the annual Leipzig Trade Fair today with a demand for increased Nazi exports, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels admitted that opposition is developing within Germany to "a series of unpopular measures" resulting from economic troubles.

Goebbels' surprise acknowledgment of "critical voices within our land" referred primarily to the complaints of German big business leaders and industrialists who are hard-pressed by increasing taxes, a shortage of raw materials and lack of sufficient labor.

Goebbels also was believed to have spoken in answer to complaints among the general population against new Nazi decrees imposed to meet the problems of declining exports, the heavy costs of armaments and the shortage of labor.

The most immediate of these problems is the continuing coffee shortage, which has caused one of the sharpest waves of grumbling since 1933.

Thousands of former trade unionists are in helpless fury against Field Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goerring's recent decree permitting increased work hours—to 10 and even 16 hours a day. Most German factories are on a 60-hour week, due to the shortage of labor. At the same time, wages have increased only slightly and under present conditions it is almost impossible for a worker in the building, metal or textile industries to quit his job.

Whiskers Sprout

OBERAMMERGAU, Germany, March 5.—(AP)—Whisker-growing began today on a large scale in this Bavarian village famed for its Passion Play.

Almost every male above adolescent age laid aside his razor in preparation for next year's resumption of the Passion Play performances after an interval of six years.

Whether a villager expects to be chosen for one of the major roles or not, he lets his beard and his hair grow.

This is because, besides those who will take the parts of Christ, the Apostles and other roles, scores of "supers" are needed for mass scenes and tradition demands that the male "supers" be be-whiskered.

A good, healthy scream proved sufficient early yesterday to rout a prowler from the home of Miss Polly Mitchell, of 255 Fifteenth street, N. E.

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 6, 1939.

TAKING A TAX

One of the most indefensible tax laws ever contemplated is to be found in House Bill 231, now before the Georgia legislature. This is the law to levy a state income tax on the money paid to the federal government as income tax.

Coming at a time when there is more urgent need than ever before of placing Georgia's taxation system upon a reasonable, intelligent and sufficiently permanent basis, this proposal is one that brings discouragement to all who have hoped an era of new progress is dawning for the state. If such tax laws are put upon the statute books, the result can be nothing but the driving away of industry and capital and a long halt in the wished-for forward march of the state.

Businessmen, seeking a place for the location of new industries, inevitably make careful study of the tax laws of the various states to which they may go. Finding such a law as this would be sufficient to drive them away from Georgia. Not only because of the inequity of the law itself, but because of its indication that the lawmakers of Georgia are apt to follow unsound tax practices in the future.

When the income tax was re-enacted in Georgia, in 1931, it was accepted as nothing but a temporary levy to meet an emergency. In other words, one more of the innumerable patches which have been stuck on the out-moded tax structure of this state.

The clause exempting monies paid as federal income taxes was omitted from that 1931 law, presumably by oversight. When, in 1937, the state income tax rates were greatly increased this exemption clause was included in the new law. House Bill 231 repeals that exemption.

Georgia necessarily competes with neighbor states for new enterprise. It would place a tremendous handicap upon this state to pass such a law, with Florida exacting no income taxes whatever, and with Alabama, South Carolina and Tennessee all allowing this deduction. In fact, of the 33 states which have income tax laws, only four refuse to allow this exemption.

Business and industry in Georgia, together with all other good citizens, realize that taxes are necessary to carry on the state program of social and economic progress. They realize new taxes must be discovered if that program is to continue. But, unless the entire tax structure of the state is reformed and put upon scientific basis, reasonably certain of continuing without drastic change for years to come, new enterprise cannot be expected to feel sufficient confidence in Georgia to locate here.

Patchwork will not do. And of all the patchwork proposals it is hard to conceive of one worse than this elimination of the federal income tax exemption. It is simply a tax upon a tax, an example of compound usury by the state, against the citizen.

GOOD RAILROAD MANAGEMENT

In a printed memorandum "to members of the family," which includes employees, bondholders and stockholders, J. L. Beven, president of the Illinois Central Railroad System, reports a record of good management deserving commendation. Although 1938 was a year of meager earnings for business, as a whole, the I. C. made a creditable showing.

During the 12 months period income shrank $8,807,655. Despite this shrinkage, however, the railroad was better off financially by $738,000 than at the end of the preceding year.

How was this accomplished in the face of a decrease in car loadings? Simply by resorting to the natural procedure of reducing operating expenses as business declined. Purchases of materials were held down to an irreducible minimum. A number of employees, whose services simply could not be utilized, were necessarily released from employment—with the probability of being returned to the pay roll with improved carloadings. Those who remained, however, received an aggregate increase in wages of $1,725,000.

The stockholders, who had already gone without dividends on their investment for six consecutive years, had another non-paying year added. Thus the management wisely distributed the necessary economies equitably among the members of the "family."

One of the best managerial achievements was the payment of interest on indebtedness. Holders of notes and bonds, direct mortgage holders of the property, received the usual payments. But a decrease of some $375,000 in this item was accomplished by reducing fixed obligations. These fixed obligations must be met, otherwise the railroad would cease to be a solvent, going concern. Good credit is essential to the successful operation of any industry. Its benefits inure to all those associated with the enterprise.

Good management deserves recognition at any time. It deserves special recognition during such difficult times as the railroads are now experiencing.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY

In the current issue of The Texas Weekly there is an article by Booth Mooney which analyzes in strikingly compelling manner the reasons why more than 1,600 people were killed in traffic accidents on Texas roads during 1938.

It is pointed out that this figure represented a decrease in fatalities since the preceding year of 21 per cent. Yet, while recognizing the improvement made, Mr. Mooney sapiently points out that, even granting another 21 per cent improvement for 1939, more than 1,200 will die this year. It is important to discover, if possible, the basic cause of those deaths and to do all humanly possible to remove it.

The article and its analysis is important to Georgia, because conditions in the two states are remarkably parallel. Each has a fairly good system of highways, each has a state highway patrol that is doing excellent work. And each showed commendable improvement in the record for 1938.

Mr. Mooney declares that more than 70 per cent of the Texas fatalities were attributable to one cause, and one cause only. That was improper driving, the factor of human error. Only a small proportion of drivers involved possessed physical defect, only a smaller proportion of cars were mechanically unsound. The highways on which the accidents occurred were, in the great majority of cases, good paved roads, perhaps not perfect by highest engineering standards, but certainly not to blame for the death that speeded upon them.

Subdividing the improper driving habits, the first is too fast driving. Not too fast because in excess of a given, mandatory speed limit. That idea as a cause of dangerous driving has been exploded long ago. But too fast for the conditions of the road, the time of the day or the amount of traffic involved.

Other wrong driving practices which resulted in Texas deaths included driving on the wrong side of the road, disregarding right-of-way rules, cutting in too sharply, disregarding stop signs and traffic signals, passing on curves and hills, and so on. In many instances pedestrians were involved and in others the offending car struck, not another vehicle but an inanimate object at the roadside.

The same recklessly wrong driving habits are to be witnessed not infrequently on Georgia highways. The State Highway Patrol is doing an excellent job but, obviously, patrolmen cannot be everywhere at all times.

It thus devolves upon better education of the individual motorist to remove the greatest safety menace of the roads. And it is undeniably true that such education must be largely self-acquired, through greater realization of responsibility and the self-imposed practice of greater care.

Road safety is, after all, predominantly an individual responsibility and the only real remedy for highway danger is individual care.

ANOTHER NUMBER ONE PROBLEM

"Who will his teacher be?" has always been a number one problem to many parents of 26,000,000 American school children. These mothers and fathers know the teacher will have much to do with the molding of their children's characters. Whether the school is allegedly progressive or just the traditional "little red school house," it's the teacher that counts most.

Some educators express amazement that the same parents who select their doctors and dentists with extreme care show little interest when it comes to putting their children in the hands of a school teacher.

The president of Harvard University devoted a large part of his report last month to the subject of inadequately prepared school teachers. The Rockefeller General Education Board, also recognizing the need for improvement, has just given $520,000 to start ten summer workshops for teachers in universities in all sections of the country.

The average training of elementary school teachers in the United States is less than two years in normal school. This is not surprising, because the average salary of teachers is under $1,200 per year. This average includes some country teachers making as little as $238 per annum, and often waiting to get it.

Teaching is a wearying job at best. When the small financial inducements are taken into consideration, together with numerous restrictions as to marriage, it is not surprising that many who have given time and expense to prepare themselves for the job, desert the educational field for something pleasanter and more lucrative. This condition makes it necessary for many schools, even if able to pay higher and steadier salaries, to employ a certain number of poorly equipped teachers.

When it is taken into account that the teacher, in many instances, sees more of the child than do the parents, the argument for better equipped teachers gains force. But teachers, whether good or bad, cannot be expected to donate their services. They are entitled to good pay, more normal treatment and steady jobs.

INCREASING WOOD USES

(From the Birmingham Age-Herald.)
Alabama and the south should be particularly interested in the proposed federal appropriations for the United States Department of Agriculture forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., which needs additional funds to carry on experiments for improving and increasing the uses of lumber. Already some of the progress made in the south's uses of forest products can be attributed to experiments made at the Wisconsin laboratory and the south would benefit from increased appropriations for the project.

The Budget Bureau has recommended an increase of $71,639 in the appropriations for the laboratory above the $628,361 already appropriated for this fiscal year. The next step is up to the congress.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

FDR POLICY SUCCEEDS WASHINGTON, March 4.—The President has paid a heavy domestic price for his foreign policy. As a senator quoted here yesterday summed it up, "he has given us alternative doses of mystery and oratory until we don't know where we stand, and fear the worst." In fact, he has induced a state of nerves, which will interfere for some time to come with sensible consideration of foreign problems. The question remains, however: has the price paid at home been balanced off by results abroad?

The question cannot be answered flatly yes or no, but it is remarkably significant that the conservative career officers of the state department believe the answer to be "yes." Bluntly speaking, they think that, while the President may have made the senate "fear the worst," he has also succeeded in instilling the same fear in the Fascist nations. Indeed, they attribute the milder German and Italian temper and the hopeful signs that the next crisis will be a mere fizzle to the atmosphere of vague but awe-inspiring American menace which the President has created.

TWO CHOICES As one sound and well-informed official put it, the President faced a desperately difficult choice in the days after Munich. It was then clear that the Fascist nations were not satisfied, that another crisis would come, and that the Democracies would probably be pushed either to war or final surrender. The President's objective was to avert both war and final surrender of the Democracies, with all the dreadful consequences they entail.

"He had two ways to go about it," it was said. "He could do something real for the Democracies, or he could convince the Fascist nations that he was going to do something real. One was almost as good as the other."

The "something real" which he could most easily do without risking American involvement in a foreign conflict was to procure repeal of the arms embargo clauses of the neutrality act. Informed opinion all along has been that, if this country merely permitted the Democracies to buy arms and ammunition here, requiring them at the same time to put the money on the barrel-head and take the goods away, the danger of serious Fascist aggression would be reduced almost to zero. Undoubtedly, the President did incline to this course, and actually hinted that it would be a wise one in his message to congress on the state of the Union.

But, unfortunately, to quote once more, "world crises wait on no man's debate." An effort to amend the neutrality act would certainly have meant an interminable debate, and the state of public opinion was so uncertain that eventual defeat was a good possibility. Therefore, the President had to revert to "convincing the Fascist nations that he was going to do something real," by creating the aforementioned atmosphere of menace. This he accomplished to do, in a long series of incidents, among which the recall of the American ambassador at Berlin, Hugh Wilson; the stinging reply to the German protest against Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes' outbursts, and innumerable presidential speeches and statements were perhaps the most important. If the optimistic trend among foreign affairs experts is any test, the atmosphere has really produced the desired result.

OLD, OLD STORY The policy of the "atmosphere of menace" is peculiarly the President's own, and, it must be admitted, has probably been carried a good deal further than it might have been by the State Department. Not even Theodore Roosevelt or Woodrow Wilson took foreign affairs so much into his own hands as the President has done. Moreover, the old story of the private White House adviser comes in here, as elsewhere in New Deal policy-making.

The truth is that William C. Bullitt, the brilliant but romantically inclined ambassador in Paris, is understood to be acting in a rather special capacity. Besides his official dispatches to the State Department, he is given to confidential letter-writing to the President, and the two friends are in constant communication by trans-Atlantic telephone. Every indication is that Bullitt is astonishingly alarmist, the best of all indications being extraordinarily free predictions as to the foreign situation which the President freely makes in private talk. No doubt, if the President took his advice entirely from the State Department's more cautious spirits, the "alternative doses of mystery and oratory" might have been less upsetting at home and just as effective abroad. But, if the President's policy really has produced results in Europe, this is a minor criticism.

Westbrook Pegler, in his column on this page one day last week, advanced the thesis that the country needs a man or a woman ranked high in one form of human artistry or activity or accomplishment, that was no reason to believe his opinions of any extraneous subject are worth a hoot.

With which thesis there is absolutely no disagreement. Many a time in years gone by this columnist has expressed the same idea. Why on earth interviewers want to tell the world what baseball players think about monogamy, or what acrobats think about theology, or theologians about anatomy, or opera singers about economy has always, to some country teachers making as little as $238 per annum, and often waiting to get it.

Where Did Pegler Sing?

Where, I'd like to ask, has Mister Pegler sung? Is he basso, baritone or tenor? Which are his best operatic roles?

If he has not sung at all, by what dispensation is he licensed to say that singing is "the lowest and most vulgar of the arts." I quote his column. Upon what basis does he reach the conclusion "singing should be women's business?"

If he really believes that, I'll gladly deed to him all the radio sopranos and tenors in the contraltos for good measure. And be well satisfied to retain only the masculine voices for my own programs.

Furthermore, Mister Pegler declares of singing that, "its masters, as a class, are jealous, silly, childish, vain, petulant, grossly ill-mannered." They know little beyond the roles, which they must learn as children learn Christmas

TO FLOP— NEW YORK, March 5.—An important public issue of the moment in New York is the question whether the impending World's Fair shall be allowed to flop for lack of lewd, lascivious, indecent and vicious exhibitions by naked women, some of whom would be called dancers, while others would not pretend to dance but would just frolic about in public with nothing on. It is not certain that the fair would flop without immoral displays, but the public interest in scientific and mechanical marvels of the age, band music and ricksha rides, on the basis of soundings to date, would seem insufficient for success.

It is known, moreover, that the Chicago fair was a "turkey" up to the time that a local judge peered over his bench at a woman who had been summoned into court on a charge of giving an obscene performance. He remarked that some people would wish to put pants on a cow and bade her go back to her pitch and sin no more. There was an implied blessing in his verdict, and the unspoken but thoroughly understood excuse, "Chicago needs the money."

Decision The decision of the honorable court became a license for any obscenity short of the most particular Parisian and Latin American novelties, and the fair was saved, financially and socially, as dusty stamps stamped from all over the Mississippi valley to ogle naked old women, including some patetic old bums, without power to enchant, who found that sitting floors was easier than scrubbing floors.

Contrary to general belief, New York is much less immoral and rowdy than Chicago and other cities. Public morals in New York would close in less than one day anything as vicious as the famous Kansas City resort which thrives under the regime of Commandatore Tomasco Pendergast, where, in waitresses stripped, a garment at a time, as they served their customers. And citizens of Fort Worth who reckon with the famous New York fair, may well know that any show as filthy as some they saw at their own fair would be kicked into the street by the New York cops and enjoined thereafter by the courts.

Twilight Zone After all, the meat show did not come by the name of "Louse Opera" without earning it. This type of theater has been a pain and a shame to the decent element of the show business for many years. Twilight zone in which trollops and procurers operate in the guise of actors. It corresponds to the web-boys or local who's school of journalism in which blackmailers have operated to the distress of regular newspaper people.

It has not been many years since one of the most famous musical comedy producers in New York went to prison and was ruined for presenting a private stage show in which a young woman made a brief nude appearance. Perhaps today the people being more liberal, he would get no more than 30 days for the same offense, but this still isn't Chicago, Kansas City or Fort Worth. Maybe it's the un-American influence of the foreigners who just won't get assimilated.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

CHARLESTON-NATCHEZ.

Readers of the National Geographic magazine and the Saturday Evening Post will not soon forget the March issue of the National Geographic with DuBose Heyward's article on Charleston, illustrated by photographs made by Anthony Stewart, not last week's Statepost with its double-page spread of pictures of Natchez in natural color, made by Ivan Dmitri, and the unsigned article on Natchez, entitled, "So Red the Rose." Many of the Charleston pictures are also in colors.

Charleston, "where mellow past and present meet," to employ one of the fascinating phrases of Mr. Heyward's article, dates back to 1670 when a band of Englishmen under the command of William Sayle planted the first permanent colony on the Carolina. One recalls the earlier Spanish effort at a settlement on the South Carolina coast in 1520 and 1540, and the French Huguenots at Beaufort which came to an early and tragic end in 1570, or thereabout. But this brief space will not permit any review of Charleston's rich traditions. Look at Mr. Heyward's ample article for that, and while you are reading again the engaging story of Charleston you will stop on every page to enjoy those marvellous pictures so skillfully photographed by Mr. Stewart and reproduced in exquisite natural tones. I marvel that the beauty of the azalea gardens can be so perfectly reproduced. The best of all the pictures, I would say, are those that present the children of Charleston.

Natchez, "unique among the cities of the United States because of its eighteenth-century homes," as the writer in last week's Post says, seems to live anew in the pictures in natural color which Mr. Dmitri captured with his camera. And again the children win. I guess they always will win. We discover in this interesting story about Natchez that there are 49 of these wonderful old homes in and about Natchez, embodying the finest and finest expressions of life which glorify the past and offer rich reward for all who dedicate themselves to the tasks of the present and the future.

More and more the nation and the world are discovering the south. All of which should serve to quicken our efforts to maintain here the finer expressions of life which glorify the past and offer rich reward for all who dedicate themselves to the tasks of the present and the future.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE FIRST CONGRESS America has celebrated the convening of the first congress of the United States, March 4, 1789. Under it and the constitution exists more individual freedom than exists anywhere else in the world. Under it exists less human misery and less poverty, dire though they are, than in any other country in the world.

Before congress is the problem of reality. Great, sweeping economic upheavals which no one quite understands; the rise of nationalism and the building of trade walls and barriers; the growth of totalitarian states which liberty, freedom of thought, speech and assembly for a temporary economic security—all these have made more difficult the task of congress.

Dig into the dusty books. See what they say about that first congress which met in New York.

Washington, knowing he would be the inevitable choice for President, was borrowing money to go to New York. He did not want the job.

Congress, newly elected after a stormy fight in which some of the states or colonies threatened to go back to the protection of England, assembled for the first meeting, the first Wednesday in March. It happened to be March 4.

There was not a quorum. The roads were bad. Some states did not care to send delegates. Not all, indeed, had adopted the constitution. Rhode Island, most stubborn, led the fight. North Carolina sulked. Patrick Henry had been most troublesome. He did not like the constitution of the United States. He had sought a Southern Confederation, an idea which was to be adopted some years later.

But, a majority of states had ratified and at last March 4 had come. There was no quorum. The delegates waited. The old congress was meeting. There was not a great deal of assurance.

THE WEEKS DRAGGED ON There was a celebration on March 4. Cannon boomed. People shouted and paraded. But still congress could not meet. The weeks dragged on. No quorum was established in either house.

It was April 14th before a tired horse bore a messenger to Mount Vernon to inform the waiting Washington he had been unanimously chosen. Pale, stern, somewhat forbidding (he never liked being President), Washington told the messenger he would be ready to leave within two days.

It was a hard journey. There were so many receptions. At New York there was a reception and a new song was sung to the tune of "God Save the King."

As his barge, manned by 13 pilots, neared the shore he could see the stairs covered with a crimson carpet. There was a cream-colored coach. He grew stubborn. He said he would walk. The committee was disconcerted but walk he did, with soldiers forcing a passage.

The senate committee was an hour and 30 minutes late when it came for him on March 30. John Adams was distraught. This was the first inauguration of a President. He was worried about precedent. Congress had debated it, too. It was important. John Adams wanted to do things as they were done in England. There had been many arguments about the house of commons and of lord back in the days of the British.

Congress heard him say, when he had kissed the Bible, "I swear." And then, with deep sincerity, he added, "So help me God." The pattern of America had begun.

NO POLITICAL PARTIES There were no political parties in that first congress. There were, indeed, a few who did not care for Washington or for Alexander Hamilton, who seemed to be running things. But they did not form any opposition and they kept quiet about their thoughts.

There were no parties in congress at last had got settled, was to start them thinking about parties. And in fact the enemy called Thomas Jefferson was stirring up certain friends in congress. The pattern of political parties was beginning to form.

The first tax caused an uproar. It was nothing to the uproar in congress when Hamilton, making a shrewd deal, advanced the legislation which caused the nation to take over the various state debts.

Even then Madison could write Jefferson, of the state of the Union:

"Our successors will have an easier task, and by degrees the way will become smooth, short and certain."

The fight grew in congress. Coldly, inexorably, Hamilton won his point as he had won it in the state conventions to ratify the constitution.

Once James Jackson, of Georgia, so lost his temper and his sense of manners that he brought into public the illegitimate birth of Hamilton. It had not pertained. He was sorry later. But he said it.

In Virginia Patrick Henry was talking about secession. Congress was worried. The critics began to grow. They harassed the President as much as they could.

So began the first congress.

150 YEARS LATER Today congress faces matters of equal importance. Through stop-gap measures this country has sought to buy its way out of problems which, sooner or later, must be faced.

There are many factors which test democracy but none greater than those which the first congress, 150 years ago, had to face. There were problems as difficult of solution in those days when the pattern was being made.

The challenge from Europe is no more grave today than it was in those first years. There were totalitarian states in those days. The German press today, which yelps when hit, screams back like some slattern, when hit by the truth of President Roosevelt's statements—that in America there is freedom and God may be worshipped according to one's choice. The truth hurts. And it is written in a Book that the truth shall make you free. Democracy is a philosophy of freedom and of truth.

It Isn't a Right But a Privilege Unless All Others Can Share It

By ROBERT QUILEN.

A small boy, tired of masticating his gum, maneuvered it to the front of his mouth and spewed it in the general direction of the gutter. It landed, and stuck, two feet from the edge of the walk.

"You shouldn't do that," said the boy's mother.

"Why not?" asked the boy. "What's the harm in a little wad of gum?"

As a matter of fact there is small harm in it. At the worst it will cling to some newly polished shoe and cause profanity. But that isn't the way to ask the question.

Suppose everybody should deposit wads of gum on the sidewalk. Apparently every New Yorker did it within a four-block area last summer, for street cleaners scraped hundreds of pounds of flattened gum from the walks in that region.

The way to determine the right or wrong, good or evil, sanity or folly of any act is to picture the state the world would be in if everybody did the same thing.

One individual has no more rights than another. No person or group is entitled to special privilege. If one can do a thing that brings him a special profit or pleasure, everybody else has a right to do the same thing.

You may be able to "get away with murder"—to enjoy some special advantage without arousing protest—because you do little apparent harm and nobody is interested enough to interfere. But if the privilege is profitable to you, it will be profitable to others, so it is only a question of time until imitators spoil your little profit by overdoing it. One person in a town of 10,000 may let his dog run free, but suppose 10,000 people did it!

A few score officials now demand time on the radio. Think how dead radio will be when all officials claim the same privilege.

Many Americans travel on foreign ships because they have read the slander, inspired by competitors, that American sailors are rude. Suppose everybody who reads the slander decides to sail on foreign ships. Many towns have their own power plants. Where would we get reserve current for a national emergency if every town had a small plant and the great systems were gone?

Co-operatives save money for groups of farmers and others, but suppose all of us did our buying that way and merchants all quit business.

Test every privilege in the same way and you'll see that freedom without duty can soon wreck itself.

OFF THE

ATLANTA DISTRICT TO SEEK $150,000 AS WESLEYAN AID

Mass Meeting Launches Campaign for $600,000; Preliminary Pledges to College Near $200,000.

A goal of $150,000 for the Atlanta district was set yesterday at a mass meeting which launched a drive to raise $600,000 for Wesleyan College.

Preliminary pledges of $32,268 were reported by Dr. W. H. LaPrade, North Georgia conference director of the campaign, and Dr. T. D. Ellis, chairman of the Wesleyan board of trustees, predicted that the remainder would be raised before the end of the drive.

Referring to the campaign in Macon, Dr. Ellis said that $150,000 of a $250,000 goal already had been contributed. He emphasized the necessity of making donations before March 15.

Dr. LaPrade reported a gift of $2,000 from one of the trustees of Agnes Scott College and a pledge of $1,000 by J. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott. Citing co-operation from other denominations, he said Dr. Louis D. Newton, of the Druid Hills Baptist church, had contributed offerings from both morning and night services yesterday.

Speakers at yesterday's meeting included Bishop W. T. Watkins, Bishop John M. Moore, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington and Dr. Dice Anderson, president of Wesleyan. Dr. W. G. Henry, presiding elder of the Atlanta district, acted as chairman.

Similar rallies are to be held in 17 other cities throughout the state during the course of the campaign. Speakers will include six bishops, 16 presidents and executives of Georgia colleges and members of the church board of Christian education at Nashville.

Tomorrow's schedule calls for meetings at Newnan, Griffin, Augusta, Statesboro and Swainsboro. Others will be held Wednesday at Marietta and Thursday at Gainesville.

CATHOLIC HOME DEDICATED HERE

Will Begin Cancer Work This Week.

Our Lady of Perpetual Help Cancer Home, the old Hebrew Orphanage building on Washington street, was dedicated officially yesterday afternoon with Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara, of the Savannah-Atlanta diocese, officiating.

Principal speakers at the public ceremony were Dr. Edgar Greene, president of the Fulton County Medical Association, and I. Gloer Hailey, Fulton county commissioner.

The home, which is to be placed in operation at the end of the week, will be staffed by the Dominican Sisters, Servants of the Relief of Incurable Cancer. It will be for cancer sufferers without hope of recovery and financially unable to pay for treatment and will be open to all persons, regardless of creed, without cost.

Dr. J. L. Campbell, chairman of the Cancer Commission of the Medical Association of Georgia, in a statement yesterday declared that it was "impossible to praise the work of the home too highly."

DELAY BENNY TRIAL 'EXPLODE' NAZI BOMB

Solve Nazi Secret

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP) Military circles heard today that army ordnance experts had solved the secret of a German-made aerial bomb which caused frightful destruction in Spanish civil war raids on Barcelona.

The Army and Navy Journal reported it had been learned that the bomb contained no liquid oxygen—as first believed—but was charged with ammonium nitrate mixed with powdered charcoal and powdered aluminum, inclosed in a light magnesium alloy shell.

Officials declined comment, but one authority said confidently there was no definite reason to believe army and commercial experts here were "fully abreast" of foreign developments.

First official word that Germany had a mysterious new bomb came when the senate military affairs committee was told of it January 25 by Major General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the air corps. Arnold said that a preliminary investigation indicated the German bomb, which caused scores of deaths in Barcelona, contained compressed liquid air. He added that the army's information was scant.

The Army and Navy Journal, semi-official military service periodical, said subsequent investigation had established the actual composition of the bomb and led to official conclusions that it was overrated as a weapon.

The bomb was said to have no penetrating power, and consequently to be ineffective against other well-constructed air raid shelters or soldiers in trenches.

Meager Savings

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(UP)—President Roosevelt now has power to streamline the government and only meager economic relief will come from the proposed legislation to reorganize federal agencies, the Brookings Institution said in a study made public today.

Savings large enough to play a really important part in bringing government expenditures within the scope of income can come only from elimination and curtailment of certain type of federal activities, it was stated. The study was made by Dr. Lewis Meriam, chairman of the Institute's department for government reorganization, and Dr. L. F. Schmeckebier.

It recommended two procedures: 1. Subject all present functions and activities to a "rigorous, detailed pruning process." 2. Develop a "more consistent" social and economic program through the re-examination of broad policies that "now are in conflict."

Defends D. A. R.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP) Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, today upheld the Daughters of the American Revolution, which drew criticism in the capital for refusing to make the organization's auditorium available for concert by Marian Anderson, negro singer.

"There are many halls in Washington," the congressman said, "which are suitable for such an occasion. Constitution Hall (D. A. R. auditorium) is wanted because it is a place exclusively for whites. It is simply another effort to advance the negro in his demand for social equality."

CONGRESS Devaluation?

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP) Demands of congressional economy advocates that the present national debt limitation of $45,000,000,000 be retained were countered today with a threat of further attempts to cheapen the dollar.

Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, announced that he had drafted legislation for an additional reduction of about 20 per cent in the gold content of the dollar and the issuance of $3,000,000,000 in new currency. He said his proposed measure would be discussed at a meeting Wednesday night of senators interested in expansion of the nation's currency.

One of the chief fears of economy advocates has been that some form of inflation might be encouraged if they are successful in reducing government expenditures and preventing an increase in the debt limitation.

'Clear TVA'

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP) Senator Norris today was positive "the TVA is going to get a clean bill of health" in a report being prepared by the special senate-house committee which investigated the agency.

Although he declined appointment to the committee, Norris said he had followed most of the public hearings and "read a great deal of the testimony, some of it twice."

Norris predicted that the committee would report: "First, there has been no fraud, and second, that all charges of corruption are absolutely blasted."

"That pretty nearly ends it," Norris added with a smile. Members of the committee said reports already had been completed by Francis Biddle, committee counsel, and Thomas Panter, committee engineer.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 5.—(AP)—Representatives of TVA and Tennessee municipalities will begin Tuesday in Chattanooga the complicated and laborious task of drafting final contracts for the $78,600,000 purchase of Commonwealth & Southern Electric properties in the state. Experts have been at work for several weeks on the preliminary drafts.

AGRICULTURE

Emancipation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 5.—(AP)—Sponsors of a bill designed to lift Arkansas sharecroppers from virtual serfdom and enable them to buy their own farms tonight planned to bring the measure before the house of representatives this week.

Drawn in the senate and already approved by that body, the bill described by the two men who conceived it as the "opening gun in a second emancipation—would settle the greater part of the state's poverty-stricken tenant farmers on their own farms.

The measure would allow farms taken over by the state for non-payment of taxes to be bought by sharecroppers on time for about one-tenth the price tenants have to pay to be resettled under the present setup of the Farm Security Administration.

The plan was conceived by C. E. Palmer, prominent Arkansas publisher, and Dr. C. O. Brannen, sociologist of the University of Arkansas. For the past year these two men have been delving into musty records of the state land office to learn how much suitable land could be made available for the program.

They found that approximately one-sixteenth of the state's tillable land had reverted to the land office for non-payment of taxes. Much of the land, they found, had not been farmed in more than 10 years.

The plan is supported by the administration of Governor Carl E. Bailey. FSA promised to lend financial and supervisory aid to it. Brooks Hayes, Democratic national committee man from Arkansas, recently addressed the house in support of the bill. Many other state and federal executives had expressed interest in the program.

LABOR

Martin Claims

DETROIT, March 5.—(AP)—Homer Martin claimed today that delegates to the United Automobile Workers' convention he has called here represented a "75 per cent of rank and file membership" in the UAW.

Martin said a credentials committee report submitted to the convention today showed that "155 or 225 locals in good standing" had sent 236 delegates to his convention.

"These delegates control 628 votes, which means that they represent 62.8 per cent of members of the UAW," Martin said. That figure, he said, was exclusive of 24 rank and file delegations that have not yet been seated.

Martin, elected president of the UAW who has been ousted from the Congress of Industrial Organizations, has assembled his supporters in convention here in opposition to a CIO-supported convention of the UAW in Cleveland March 27.

Martin's negotiations with the Ford Motor Company were praised in a resolution passed by the convention today, but the resolution was returned to committee for a minor change. Martin promised that "at our next convention we'll be back with 100,000 Ford workers organized under the banner of the UAW."

GENERAL

Civil Liberties

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—The American Civil Liberties Union asserted today after a national survey that no city in the country, not even among those ranked comparatively as "very good," accomplished more than a "50 per cent observance of the civil rights presumably granted its citizens."

The study, made during the past year by Rebecca A. Reis, a researcher under the guidance of a committee headed by Richard S. Childs, president of the City Club of New York, will be turned over, one union official said, to the special bureau on civil rights established in the Department of Justice by United States Attorney General Frank Murphy. The union said its information was obtained through questionnaires sent to mayors, police chiefs, school superintendents and other public officials, and to correspondents of the A. C. L. U. Of 959 cities thus queried, responses were obtained from 332, representing an aggregate population of 36,000,000. (Atlanta was not rated. Augusta was rated "poor.")

The union ranking of the 13 major cities investigated put Cleveland, New York and St. Louis in the classification of "very good," along with 39 smaller cities, and made the following classifications among others of the major 13:

"Good"—San Francisco, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh.
"Fair"—Buffalo, Philadelphia, Baltimore.
"Poor"—Chicago, Boston.
"Very Poor"—Detroit, Los Angeles.

A total of 152 cities of various sizes were put down as "good," the remainder being described as "fair" to "very bad." The three "worst" cities, said the union, were Little Rock, Ark., New Orleans and Tampa, Fla.

"The right of free speech," said the A. C. L. U., "apparently suffers less assault than any other and, as seems to have always been the case, the closely related right of public assembly is the most universally disregarded."

In this connection, only three cities in the whole group were marked as "bad" specifically in the matter of free speech. There were Jersey City, N. J.—against whose mayor—Frank Hague—the union has been a frequent critic and court antagonist—Little Rock and Memphis.

Benny Rests

HOLLYWOOD, March 5.—(UP) Jack Benny, radio and screen comedian, disclosed tonight that his forthcoming New York trial on smuggling charges has been postponed "a couple of weeks."

Benny, who was scheduled to go to trial tomorrow after several earlier postponements, said his attorneys obtained another continuance of "a couple of weeks or so."

"I'm not sure just what the new date is but I believe it is April 3," he said.

The comedian is leaving tomorrow for Palm Springs for a three-day rest, after which he will return to Hollywood to complete retakes on his latest picture.

He was indicted several months ago on charges that he and Albert N. Chaperau smuggled $2,131 worth of jewelry into the United States.

Gift Backfires

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 5.—(AP)—Robert J. McAusland turned over his foundry to his employees in return for a lifetime job at $200 a month and now the employees claim McAusland has absented himself and no longer is of service to the firm.

The employees seek an injunction to restrain McAusland from "interfering with the operation of the firm" and requested the district court to set up a depository where a salary of $100 a month could be placed for McAusland.

The employees state they took over the controlling interest April 30, 1938, when McAusland agreed to give entire control to them in return for a lifetime job for so long as he was able and willing to work for a $200-a-month salary.

On August 28, 1938, McAusland decided to devote more time to leisure, the petition said, and an agreement was made to cut his salary to $100 a month.

District Judge Sam Hooker granted a temporary restraining order and set March 16 for a hearing on a temporary injunction. He instructed the trustees to deposit the $100-a-month in the court clerk's office for McAusland.

P. C. GILHAM FOUND DEAD IN BEDROOM

Hotel Maid Discovers Body of Prominent Atlanta Businessman.

P. C. Gilham Sr., prominent Atlanta businessman, was found dead in a downtown hotel room yesterday morning of what was believed to be a heart attack. He was 60 years of age.

The body of Gilham, who lives at 40 Maddox drive, was found by a hotel maid yesterday by a negro maid. He was clothed fully and had a large sum of money on his person, according to police.

The maid told officers that she had knocked on the door earlier, but had received no answer. When she made her rounds again at noon, and still received no answer, she opened the door with a pass key and found Gilham, she reported.

He had been in good health, according to his friends, and the cause of his death will be held today to officially determine the cause of death.

A pioneer in the electrical and appliance business here, he retired from the presidency of the Gilham Electrical Company in 1933. He was a founder and principal stockholder of the firm.

His numerous activities also included the field of radio. At one time he owned and operated station WDBE, which he subsequently gave to Tech High school. He also served for time as president of the Builders' Exchange Club of Atlanta.

He is survived by his wife; two sons, P. C. Gilham Jr. and H. L. Gilham, both of Atlanta, and a daughter, Mrs. James Hancock. He was a member of the First Baptist church of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow in the chapel of Brandon-Bond-Condor by the Rev. Theodore V. Morrison. Burial will be at West View cemetery under the direction of Brandon-Bond-Condor.

Funeral services were chosen from friends and business associates. These are Carroll B. McLaughlin, F. A. Jordan, Charles A. Collier, O. M. Jackson, H. E. Durham and George L. Washington.

VICTIM OF ACCIDENT IS IDENTIFIED HERE

Funeral arrangements are to be announced by J. Allen Couch.

POLITICS

McNutt's Tactics

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(UP)—Political supporters of Paul V. McNutt said tonight that he probably will base his campaign for the 1940 Democratic presidential nomination on his advocacy of a strong foreign policy aimed against dictatorships and calling for American leadership of world democracy.

McNutt's views on foreign affairs would furnish his chief ammunition in pre-convention skirmishing, according to political strategists planning his campaign. It was launched in Indianapolis on January 1 and is the only active one known to date for the Democratic nomination.

A persistent advocate of a vigorous American policy both in Europe and the far east, McNutt is now in Manila as American high commissioner to the Philippines and has advised friends he will remain there until early summer, then returning to the United States.

His previous plans to return in January or February were canceled when he was advised through indirect channels by President Hoover that he would be required to resign his $18,000 Manila post once he left the Philippines.

He was indicted several months ago on charges that he and Albert N. Chaperau smuggled $2,131 worth of jewelry into the United States.

COUNCIL TO ELECT FIRE CHIEF TODAY

Fight Expected Over Fire- masters' Nominee; Hailey Successor Vote Slated.

A divided city council is in prospect for this afternoon's session at which a successful bid for the position of fire chief will be made by J. Parker and a successor to former Alderman I. Gloer Hailey are to be named.

C. C. Styron, second assistant chief of the fire department, and W. B. Fanning, first assistant chief, are the candidates for Parker's position. Although Styron has been recommended by the board of firemasters, it is considered certain that Fanning is to be nominated from the floor and a close contest is expected.

Styron will be nominated by Councilman John T. Marler, chairman of the fire board, and Fanning's name will be proposed by Councilman C. L. Chosewood and E. A. Minor, the latter said last night.

Other interest centers on the selection of a successor to the late fire chief, Councilman Howard Haile and Frank Wilson, the other sixth ward delegates, are reported to be in disagreement on the question. Haile has said he would support Raleigh E. Drenth, while Wilson is said to favor W. W. Burns.

Council also will have up for consideration the fate of approximately 140 salary increases which were passed last week and then held up. Councilman John A. Hailey has pledged they will be sent back to the finance committee for further study.

COMMUNITY CHEST BUDGET IS STUDIED

Representative of Agencies Will Confer On Allocations, Goals.

Community Chest budget studies will begin today among the 32 agencies over allocation of funds available for this year, Dr. Herman L. Turner, budget committee chairman, announced. The studies also will develop a basis for next fall's campaign goal.

Announcement of the first meeting of this afternoon, to bring together representatives of all the agencies responsible for care and protection of children, was made at the same time with the scheduling of two other group meetings.

The group charged with youth guidance and development will meet Wednesday morning and that concerned with public health and the care of the sick and handicapped will meet Wednesday afternoon.

Members of the youth group include Weaver Marr, representing Boy Scouts; Mrs. Tom Burke, Camp Fire Girls; Mrs. C. F. Palmer, Girl Scouts; Ed Kahn, Jewish Educational Alliance; Miss Mary Burns, Y. W. C. A. and A. T. Walden, Butler Street Y. M. C. A. They will meet with G. K. Selden and Devereaux F. McCleathery representing the budget committee.

SEEK OKLAHOMA IN PARITY GROUP

Will Be Proposed To Governors' Conference.

Okahoma will be proposed for admission to the Southeastern Governors' conference at the March 21 meeting here, Governor Carl E. Bailey, of Arkansas, announced in Fort Smith, Ark., last night.

The organization is seeking adjustment of the southern freight rates. If the southwestern state is admitted to the conference, Governor Bailey announced he would seek to have the name of the organization changed to "Southern Governors' Conference."

The announcement followed a discussion of interstate matters in Fort Smith last night with Governor Tom C. Phillips, of Oklahoma.

BERIGAN TO PLAY AT SHRINE MOSQUE

'Miracle Man of Swing' Will Perform Thursday.

Bunny Berigan, who will bring his swing band to the Shrine mosque for a dance Thursday night, is known among New York musicians as "the hottest man in town."

Bunny, at 29, can do more tricks with a trumpet, his agents say, than any other trumpet player in the country. He has behind him the experience of playing a year with Paul Whiteman, Rudy Vallee and others. He has risen rapidly in the musical world and has been dubbed by some "the miracle man of swing."

Berigan will feature Kathleen Lane and Danny Richards as his vocalists.

LOVE COMES LAST

Laura Tells Andy She Will Meet Him At Boathouse, After Dinner

By JULIA ANNE MOORE.
INSTALLMENT XXIV.

"New York is just a great big country town," she told him, smiling. "I didn't like it so much at first, but it's growing on me." "And the advertising racket," he said, "is it fun—as much fun as telling the world from BRY?" "In a way it is, but sometimes I get homesick for the sight of a lake. Have you?" she asked, "been over to Newbury since you opened the Bridgehaven office?" He hadn't. "Too busy," he lied. "But I want to know about you, what you've been doing, how you spend your spare time. Come on, tell old Andy all."

She tried to laugh, but it was a poor attempt. She said, quickly, "I've been working very hard, which hasn't left me any spare time."

"But surely you've had time to play a little," he persisted. "A little," she confessed. "But I have been around to a few parties, a few shows. But nothing exciting."

"Ah, ha! Now we're getting somewhere," Andy said. "Is he the great lover as well as a great advertiser man, Laurie?" She peered at him a moment, then turned her eyes away. "Sorry," he said. "Didn't mean to tread on sacred ground."

She lifted her eyes to his again. "Have you been drinking, Andy?" He didn't answer for a long while, then said soberly, "I'm not a very good actor, Laurie. Trying to be casual, I'm likely to be silly instead. But you wouldn't understand that."

What had he meant by that? What could she say in reply?

He relieved her of the necessity of saying anything. "Let's keep it light and foolish, this talk of ours," he said. "For my sake. It's easier to talk about things that don't matter—and safer, Laurie."

She said, evenly, "You aren't making sense, Andy." She had to pretend she didn't know what he was talking about. There wasn't anything else she could do. The thing she had hungered for a little while ago was the thing she most feared at this moment. She said as quietly as before, "Tell me about Nina. She's unbelievably happy, of course. I could see that. But her heart..."

"After a little silence," Andy said, "Do you mind if I come down there where I don't have to shout?" He slid off the end of the board and dropped head-first into the pool. He came up almost directly beneath the lower where she sat and in a moment was sitting on the edge of the pool a few feet away, wiping the water from his face, grinning again.

"The old swimming hole, modern style," he said. "Wouldn't it like to have that in my backyard?" He said then, "Nina seems to be well. You can be sure she gets the best of care."

"I am sure of it." Watching him, she wondered if he were holding something back, something she should know. But she hadn't the courage to ask him that.

"You spoke," Andy said, "of her being happy. She is, and she has been since—from the beginning," he finished clumsily. "So you see, I was wrong again."

She was honestly puzzled by that, thinking he referred to something he had said during the past few minutes. "Wrong—in what way, Andy?"

Something I said a long time ago. I thought it was a mood, a surface notion that would soon wear off. It wasn't and it hasn't. She tried to look at him and failed. She tried to think of some way to tell him they must turn back before another word was spoken, and failed again. She called up the old formula: This man is Nina's husband! She said it over and over again in her mind.

But that was no good, either, and she told herself they must not turn back too abruptly. It wasn't merely that things mustn't be said, they mustn't be felt. Somehow she must make him understand that.

Andy's voice came to her low and indistinct, as if from a distance. "I'd like to talk with you, Laurie. Not like this, pretending and beating around, but as nature, intelligent persons should be able to talk. You see, Laurie—"

Quick, bright laughter hung in the air. In a moment Nina and Dale Cromwell came around the house. Nina was wearing a swimming suit, Dale was not. Beside him, she seemed no more than a child, a lovely, carefree child.

Laura and Andy watched them come toward the pool and Laura said under breath, "Your wife, Andy—and my sister."

"Yes," Andy said, not moving. "My wife. I've never forgotten and I never will." And then he said, barely moving his lips, "Somehow I never thought you would be afraid of the truth."

"I'm not afraid," she said again. "Of course you're afraid. There are things you should know, but you haven't the courage to hear them."

"I'm not afraid," she said again. They couldn't leave it like this. There would never be any peace for either of them. "I'll go to the boathouse immediately after dinner. You can come there—if you still want to talk."

Nina was shouting, "Fraid-cat! You haven't even been in the water!" Andy jumped up and slapped his wet trunk. "You don't get like this sitting in the sand," he said as Nina and Dale came up to them. "Your charming sister is the afraid-cat."

Laura looked from Andy to Nina, but she didn't say anything. It was 6 o'clock before Bart and Hannah came in from the badminton court and by the time they changed into their swimming suits, the others were ready to come in. Bart said, looking at Laura, "But you can't all run off like this. The party's just beginning."

Nina looked as if she wanted to stay, but Andy dissuaded her. "You're turning purple around the gills," he said, grinning, "which means you've been in the water long enough. Overlooking the fact that I'm about all in myself."

Andy's right! Laura said. "We've had our share. Run along, Nina. As soon as I do my daily dive from the high board, I'll follow."

Andy and Nina went off then and Laura climbed the tower ladder and moved out to the end of the board. She called down to Bart, "I always make myself do this at least once because I'm afraid of it and I don't like to be afraid."

"She does, too," Hannah said. "I never knew people disciplined themselves the way she does." Bart nodded. "Very few do," he said, and yelled at Laura, "All right, one to make ready..."

It was a good dive, but as Laura came to the surface wearing a broad smile, Bart cried, "Bravo! You'll be showing Hannah up one of these days if you keep at it."

Hannah didn't say anything, but she look at Bart with drawn brows that signified a question wholly unrelated to what he had said. Then, still not speaking, she walked over to the ladder. Poised on the end of the high board, she suddenly stepped back, paused for an instant and moved quickly forward again. Her feet seemed barely to touch the board before she was in the air, slim arms outstretched, head up, back arched, her long, white legs straight and so closely pressed together that they formed an apparently undivided tapering extension of her perfectly formed torso. It was a beautiful thing to see, that effortless swan dive, and both Laura and Bart applauded vigorously.

But Laura sensed what Bart did not and when Hannah rose and swam toward the far end of the pool, she said, quickly, "I want you to do something for me, Bart—be nice to Hannah while you're here."

He looked at her, perplexed. "But I'm always nice to her."

"Extra nice, then," Laura begged. "When I come back to the office, I'll tell you why. I can't now, but it's terribly important."

"I tell you I'm always nice to her. Don't forget," he said. "I've known her since she was a kid. She knows how to take me."

Laura nodded. "Of course, Bart, but—well, to put it another way, don't be quite so nice to me. I know how this must sound to you, but there's sense behind it."

Hannah was coming back, using a leisurely but effective crawl that pulled her through the water like a motor-driven torpedo. The girl was at her best in water, and she knew it too well to be modest about it. She climbed out, smiling. "Well, how was it?" she asked.

Laura said, "Beautiful, Hannah. I'll never understand how you cut the water the way you do, leaving hardly a ripple." She said then, "You two don't mind my not staying, do you? Nina's dressing in my room and I'll have to play maid as I did for a good many years before she was married."

She left them there, but as she walked away she could almost feel Hannah's eyes fixed upon her, those eyes in which there was still an unanswered question. Poor Bart, Laura thought. He still thought of Hannah as the child he had known years ago and at this moment was no nearer understanding what she had asked him to do than before she came.

What would he have said had she told him frankly that Hannah was in love with him?

Suddenly, Bart and Hannah were forgotten, pushed out of mind by what she had said to Andy: "I'll go to the boathouse immediately after dinner. You can come there—if you still want to talk."

"She knew why she had done it, but now she wondered that she could have been, even momentarily, so little aware of the danger involved. The boathouse was a good 200 yards from the house. To go there and return, unobserved, was all but impossible.

Whatever the motive, the whole idea was dishonest and sneaky—and dangerous. Far better to leave matters as they were than to hazard the possibility of making them infinitely worse."

At that moment she was decided. She definitely would not go, and yet when half an hour after dinner she found herself in the garden, she was too intent upon reaching the boathouse to attempt analysis of the curious sequence of ideas that had brought her there.

She told herself: I'll make him understand there can be no loose ends, no memories, nothing at all between us. And then we will never again see each other alone.

Jock Sutherland Resigns Post as Pitt Head Football Coach

All in the GAME

by Jack Troy

The office critics won't be asking about Bull Lea anymore. Bull Lea Saturday won the $50,000 Widener challenge cup race at Hialeah in Miami. Stagehand, the big favorite, finished third.

Well, it was a bright May day a year ago at Churchill Downs. Ten thoroughbreds walked out on the track led by a white pony. There was a carnival air to the ancient Downs, with gay flags fluttering in the infield and thousands crowding the rails and fences to get a view of the horses.

The Derby was coming up. A hush fell over the crowd as the band played "My Old Kentucky Home." The horses continued postward. Most of them showed spirit. But not Bull Lea, this corner's choice. He just plodded on.

The Bull was being given a heavy play by the race writers, but he didn't look the part going postward. He seemed more like a bull being led to a slaughter pen. And so Bull Lea was eighth in a field of 10. The Bull was knocked to his knees at the start and never was in the race.

There has been no way to forget Bull Lea since. This has been due to the fact that, from time to time, someone invariably asks—"What is the name of that horse you picked to win the Derby?"

The answer always serves to bring a gloating expression to the questioner's face. He then departs somewhat triumphantly.

But the tables are turned now. For the remainder of the year, I am going around asking people, "What was the name of THAT horse that won the $50,000 race at Hialeah?"

And if they don't remember, I'll tell 'em. Good old Bull Lea. He was just a year late.

THE BLUEBIRD CLUB.

By the time this correspondent reaches the Cracker camp at Savannah, a week hence, it is very likely that Sir Richard Niehaus and his capable cohort, Guy (Pea) Green, will have the Bluebird club of 1939 in good voice.

It ought to be a banner year for the club, inasmuch as Niehaus previously has not had nearly so much young talent available.

The Bluebird club is the Crackers' rookie organization. In off hours, and especially at night, the boys are not allowed to sit out in the park and moon over loved ones back home.

Young ball players are prone to get homesick. In fact, despite the Bluebird club and its buoyant atmosphere, a rookie packed up and left for home last year.

Usually, after one or two meetings, however, a Cracker Bluebird never has a chance to get homesick. The oral treatment provided by Messrs. Niehaus and Green is very soothing to the soul, so to speak.

The timid rookies are required to make speeches. In his more mellow moods, Mr. Pea Green sings. And if things are going just right, Mr. Niehaus adds his voice in one of the most weird duets ever heard by man or rookie.

Now and then a baseball writer is called in to make a speech. If he knows what he is doing, the b. w. pleads a previous engagement. If he doesn't know what he is doing—and that happens sometimes—well, he just asks for it.

When time comes for the first cut, a very touching scene is enacted. Dick Niehaus becomes attached to most of the rookies and is very sad at seeing them go. And on such occasions, he sings the club's theme song—"Bye, Bye Bluebird."

Those who would shed a tear are forced to laugh. For Sir Richard Niehaus is no Caruso. In fact, Nelson Eddy could spot him a few chords and still finish strong at the wire.

PROGRESSIVES HAVE GREAT YEAR.

The Jewish Progressive Club, playing under a new coach, Harold Bennett, has just concluded one of its most successful years in basketball.

The Progressives started out without the services of Steve Browdy and Pony Minsk. They naturally were off to a slow start and then finished with a rush. The season's record was 19 wins and three losses. This brought much satisfaction to such esteemed

RUSSELL MEETS GAINESVILLE FIVE FOR N.G.I.C. TITLE

Davis Expected To Spark Play of Defending Champions.

Tonight from the walls of the Fulton High gymnasium, between the hours of 9 and 10 o'clock, will be resounding the cheers and jeers of supporters of quintets of the Russell Wildcats and Gainesville High. The two fine fives, which have fought their way through a gruelling N. G. I. C. tournament here last week square off to battle for the conference crown.

The Wildcats are the defending titlists and are favored to cop the crown for the second straight year, but the Gainesville lads have shown a potency not to be trifled with in downing Newnan and Decatur, two strong quintets, in their march to the final bracket. Russell must display top form to dispose of the fast breaking, little red five from up-state.

DEPEND ON DAVIS. Russell will depend upon their high scoring ace, Jack Davis, who has averaged 16 points per game this season, to do most of their sharp shooting. Gainesville will bank on Morrison, who held Decatur's best bet, Forward Bell, to a single, measly field goal in the semi-finals, to stop the rampaging Mr. Davis. In addition, Russell, however, the Wildcats boast fine snipers in McCoy, Dodd and Upchurch, the latter a long shot artist.

The hustling Morrison, of Gainesville, is also a fine shot, being high scorer in the Decatur fracas in addition to his defensive play. Chandler and Allen also have displayed fine form for the Gainesvilles in the tourney, and they will attempt to match the taller Russell with a fast-breaking, well-rounded attack featuring long-range fire by their sharp shooting guards. The championship melee should be a fine exhibition of hardwood play by two fine quintets of youngsters.

At 8 o'clock the Russell girls' team will open the evening's entertainment in a game with some other sextet. The Russell lasses have lost but one game this season, and wish to challenge any top-notch girls' high school team in the state to vie with them in a curtain-raiser to the N. G. I. C. conference title struggle.

CHILDS ANNEXES WEST END SHOOT

Dr. Leroy Childs again led the West End Gun Club shooters by breaking 50 straight targets. Clyde King Jr. was second with 49.

The added bird division ended in a tie between Chester M. L. Maul, Mary Baldwin, Colonel E. D. Smith and Bill Ward. Ward was declared winner by the toss of a coin.

Mary Baldwin was high lady, with Mrs. Clyde Ward runner-up. Pro honors were shared by Lon Davis, Gene Gull and J. L. Franklin, with 45s.

L. L. Maul led new shooters with 39 and Claude Westfall topped visiting marksmen with 45.

EXPLAIN SPORTSMEN BILL

E. D. Smith To Discuss Game, Fish Legislation in Radio Address.

E. D. Smith, president of the Atlanta Sportsman's Club and a director in the Georgia Wildlife Federation, will explain the natural resources bill which sportsmen hope to see pass in a radio address over station WSB at 5:15 this afternoon.

One of the chief aims, Smith will point out, is to put the game and fish department in a permanent set-up unhampered by political strings.

The chief purpose of the bill is to better conditions in the state. He will make an appeal to all fishermen and hunters interested to see their legislators to get the bill to the floor and not let it be killed in committee.

The bill was drawn by an impartial group and there are no political ideas behind it. A little push is needed, it seems, and Georgia sportsmen are urged to

Altoona Bess Takes First in Derby Stake

Ray Carter's Rebel Wins Runner-Up Honors in Atlanta Field Trials.

By CLINT DAVIS.

HAMPTON, Ga., March 5.—Altoona Bess Dungeval, a rangy liver-and-white pointer owned and handled by J. H. Geffken, of Atlanta, turned in some fine groundwork backed up by a staunch point on liberated quail to go up as tops in the final day's event of the first annual Atlanta Field Trial run on Fears farm near here today.

Altoona, a promising pointer with excellent confirmation, performed before a gallery of nearly 500 canine enthusiasts and gave Judges Hunter, Pope and Wallace Gray little trouble in deciding the winner of the derby stakes.

Runner-up to the champion was another pointer, Ray Carter's lemon and white Rebel who put up a spunky run despite recent confinement in the hospital. Georgia Cracker Beau, white and black ticked setter, owned and handled by C. V. Mason Jr., finished next to Carter's dog for third place honors in the derby stake.

ROSE WINS. Saturday's program witnessed running of both senior and junior puppy stakes. Edgefield Georgia Rose, owned by J. D. Crump, of Macon, and handled by Fred Jordan, topped the day's event with a very impressive win in the senior puppy stakes. Rose, white and orange setter, was credited by a majority of the spectators as one of the most promising youngsters to be seen in these parts. Beau's Stylish Lass, black and white setter, owned by Miss Frances Learzer, turned in a very popular win in the junior puppy stakes.

Silver trophies were awarded to first place winners while awards of merchandise and dog feed were presented to winners in second and third place. All prizes were provided by friends and members of the club.

Owners, handlers and the entire gallery were high in their praise of the fine work of both judges. Hunter, Pope, of Monticello, and Wallace Gray, of Newnan, handled both days of the trial in a very efficient manner.

TWO TRIALS. Ray Carter, president of the Atlanta Field Trial Club, sponsor of the two-day event, first of its kind held locally, assured members and visitors at today's running that in the future the organization would sponsor at least two trials every year. All club officials, including President Carter, Secretary Francis Dwyer, Ed Friend, W. O. Lindsay, Severin Ulmer and Grady Fears deserve credit for the efficient handling of the event.

Interest created by the trials was reflected in the large gallery and well known dog fanciers in attendance. These included Hal Lindsay, Al Martin, Bobby Jones, Jackson Dick, Johnny Martin, John Woodward, Ralph Minehan, Buddy Jones, Ralph Zachry, Charlie Black, Earnest Hall, Boyd Lindsay, Clyde King, Dr. W. H. Ridley, Mrs. Fred Jordan, Charlie Jordan and Bennett Hutchison to mention only a few prominent in Georgia gun dog circles who watched the proceedings with interest.

Carl Goettenger captured the Bobby Jones blind bogey yesterday by coming up with a 72.

Foursome Captures White Meet With 122. Howard Shaw, Red Collins, Bob Smith and Buck Thompson won the John A. White dogfeite yesterday with a 122 low net. J. B. Hill, Doc Byers, J. W. Simmons and J. C. Lewis were second with 124. About 300 played the course yesterday.

CHANDLER OUT TILL MID-SEASON

New York Yankees' Physician Makes Gloomy Report.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 5.—(P)—The season's first cloud appeared on the New York Yankees' horizon today in the form of a report by Dr. R. E. Walsh that Fitcher Spud Chandler would be lost to the club until mid-season because of a broken ankle.

The club physician visited Chandler at Atlanta, Ga., on his way to camp, viewed X-ray plates and consulted with the surgeon who had attended the Yankee hurler. Dr. Walsh said it had been necessary to place a metal bracelet around the break.

Chandler fractured his ankle while getting a little pre-season conditioning at the University of Georgia stadium.

Manager Joe McCarthy, who had hoped to have the big right-hander back late in May or June, said gloomily it might have been

DISAGREEMENT WITH ATHLETIC BOARD IS CAUSE

Pittsburgh's New Simon-Pure Policy Probably Responsible.

PITTSBURGH, March 5.—(P)—Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland announced tonight he had asked the University of Pittsburgh to accept his resignation as head football coach "effective at once."

"It is true that I have asked the university to accept my resignation effective at once," Sutherland said, "I do not care to say anything more until I have seen Chancellor (John Gabbert) Bowman on Monday."

His resignation, in the form of a letter to Chancellor John Gabbert Bowman, was delivered Saturday morning but official announcement was not to have been made until Wednesday.

In his resignation, Sutherland outlined the university's two-year release him from the agreement in his contract which called for continuing a salary of $10,000 a year for two years after giving notice.

Chancellor Bowman refused to comment, promising a statement later, but he did confirm the fact that Sutherland's resignation was in his office. The chancellor has been ill the past few days, but was aware of the letter.

To Miss. State?

The latest rumor has Sutherland going to Mississippi State College. He is said to have been in contact with Mississippi State officials during the past two weeks.

A report from Jackson, Miss., said Sutherland met last week in Cincinnati, Ohio, with President Duke Humphrey and Athletic Director Rudy Noble, of Mississippi State, to discuss the possibility of his going to the southern school. The salary said to have been offered him was $13,500.

The university was not expected to stand in the way of Sutherland's immediate resignation, letting the famous coach a free agent.

Since his "ruckus" early in 1937 with W. Don Harrison, director of athletics, Sutherland has been mentioned prominently as on his way out at Pitt. At that time Harrison is reported to have told him, "I made you, and I'll break you." A disagreement over the amount of spending money given the victorious Pitt footballers after the Rose Bowl game, January 1, 1937, added fuel to the wrangle.

TENDER RESIGNATION. Finally, after more than a month of conflicting statements, rumors and conferences, Harrison tendered his resignation.

With the promotion of James Hagan as Pitt athletic director, came a series of reforms designed to purify athletics. The "Hagan plan" was endorsed by Chancellor Bowman and adopted by the athletic council in 1937.

The exact reason for Sutherland's resignation was not disclosed, but there appeared little doubt that bickering with freshmen football players over work and pay, depletion of the squad by ineligibility and continuing arguments over policy paved the way for the letter.

His resignation, not unexpected and often rumored, severs a 19-year connection with Sutherland's Alma Mater—four as a student and 15 as a coach.

Four of his Panther teams accepted invitations to represent the east in the annual Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena, Cal. He took the Panthers to the west coast in 1927, 1929, 1932 and 1937. He won one victory, defeating Washington, 21-0, on January 1, 1937. Previous results in order were Stanford 7, Pitt 14, and Southern California 35.

EIGHT TIMES. His teams won the mythical eastern championship eight times, once at Lafayette, where he formerly coached, and seven times the first half than the last half of the season. With all the rain and postponed games, early in the year we can get along with Ruffing, Gomes and Hildebrand. But we'll need him later when the double-headers pile up," he asserted.

When the accident occurred about a month ago, it was thought Chandler would miss only two or three weeks of the regular season. Then it developed that the ankle had to be reset to heal properly. Now it seems the former University of Georgia football and baseball star will miss his chance to have his greatest year. He won 14 games last year for the Yankees and was handicapped by a bad arm. Chandler had been planning to join his teammates in Atlanta when they play an exhibition there this spring.

Crackers Sign Eisert, Young Infielder

24 REACH CAMP; 1ST DRILL TODAY AT TEN O'CLOCK

Savannah Officials Welcome Atlanta Crackers; Johnny Rucker Missing.

By ROY WHITE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 5.—Louis Eisert, a promising 17-year-old infielder, has been signed by the Atlanta Crackers and will report here tomorrow morning to start the 1939 spring training grind, it was announced this afternoon by President Earl Mann.

Eisert was signed by Neil Millard, who also lined up Harry Johnston with the Crackers last year, and comes highly recommended.

The youngster hails from Louisville, Ky., and was a student at Roger Hornsby's baseball school at Hot Springs. He left the school and is en route here to join his new mates.

MANN QUERIED.

"What kind of a player is this Eisert?" President Mann was asked. "All I know is that he is reported to be a great prospect, can knock the cover off that baseball. I don't even know what position he plays," Mann came back.

Eighteen players, Manager Paul Richards, Trainer Dick Niehaus, President Mann, Scout Nap Rucker and Coach Guy Green arrived on the training site by nightfall tonight and are ready to answer the first sound of the song at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

President Bobby Lamotte and other officials of the Savannah baseball team welcomed the vanguard of Crackers late this afternoon and appear anxious to have the Crackers leave here in advance of the opening of the Savannah training.

SEEK HELP.

In fact Lamotte and his aides already have begun to talk to President Mann and Richards regarding talent which Savannah hopes the Crackers will leave here after the training period ends.

John Rucker was among those missing tonight. He was ordered to stay at home a couple of days more for fear that he would break into the training too strenuously, particularly since an attack of flu, Rucker is slated to report about Thursday or Friday along with the remainder of the squad.

Richards and Mann also thought well of the idea of leaving Rucker behind for several days at least.

Ted Pritchett, from far-away Waxahachie, Texas, was a lone-some driver on the road this afternoon. He passed President Mann a couple of times before Earl recognized him and stopped. "I am homesome and want some company. A 1,300-mile drive alone is no pleasure," Ted said, so Luman Harris left Mann's party and completed the journey with Pritchett.

TRAPSHOOTER.

Arthur Cusaden, Tampa trap and skeet shooter, and a popular competitor with Atlanta shooters, was a visitor in the Cracker camp tonight. He was just passing through and chatted a while with some old friends.

The players already in camp include: Harry Johnston, Luman Harris, Ted Pritchett, Woodrow Hargrove, James Smith, Larry Miller, Onnie Robinson, Steve Stein, Mike Peiterson, Les Coy, Lowell Hamons, Winslow Stroupe, Clyde Small and Robert Chipman, pitchers; Larry Smith, Henry Gotschalk and Paul Richards, catchers; Marshall Mauldin, Alf Anderson, Russ Peters, Al Rubeling and James Francoline, infielders; Fritz Oetting is the lone outfielder in camp.

Durham wired that he will be a couple of days late reporting, due to a heavy cold.

Engel Signs Lucas To Lookout Contract.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 5.—(AP)—Engel, president of the Chattanooga Lookouts, announced he had signed the veteran pitcher, Charley "Red" Lucas to a contract.

Lucas broke into the Southern Association 19 years ago with Nashville. For many years he was with Cincinnati. Later he hurled for Pittsburgh.

Cracker Fans Think Third Is Weak Spot.

Supporters Call Catching and First Base Posts Strongest.

(Editor's Note: The Constitution's roving reporter today tried to find out from fans which positions on the Cracker team were weakest and which were strongest. The box score:)

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Cracker fans are looking for third base to be the weakest position on the 1939 team and think the catching and first base will be strongest.

Almost without exception, fans bemoaned the loss of Johnny Hill at third and in the same breath praised the catching of Paul Richards and Dewey Williams and the first base performance of Jack (Rabbit) Bolling.

KIRBY AND MILEY BEATEN BY BERG AND IRWIN, 1 UP

Dot Will Play Qualifying Round for Belleair With Hatfield.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.

BELLEAIR COUNTRY CLUB, March 5.—Well, I have been here four days now and haven't broken 80 on this golf course yet. It is much harder than I had figured. It is pretty long, but worse than that, there are so many traps if you miss one you have done well. I have been in every one of them. Played in an exhibition match this afternoon with Patty Berg, Laddie Irwin and Marion Miley. Marion and I teamed against Pat and Laddie, and we had a very good match which ended on the eighteenth green by Pat and Laddie winning, one up. Patty sunk a long putt for her par four on the eighteenth. Pat scored a fine 77, Laddie 85, Marion 82 and I had an 80.

TAKES SEVEN.

I took a big seven on the par-five 16th hole. I can't get it without a seven and, believe me, that runs up the score. This course is just about as windy as the Miami Biltmore. There seems to be some wind every day.

Patty got in last night from St. Augustine, where she played that tournament from Betty Jameson. She complained of being very tired, but even at that she had a 77 today and was hitting her shots beautifully. Pat reminds me of a machine, she is just the same all the time. She is paired with Laddie to qualify tomorrow and the first 16 get in. I play with Francis Hatfield, Miley with Cotnam, then Bauer with Dettweiler. Glena Collett Vare is also entered, which makes a very fast field.

SKIPPY SHOOT.

Friday morning there was a skeet shoot here and Glenna and her husband were in the finals together. Glenna is really good, for she beat her husband, and her score was 94 which they say was only one point short of what women's champions shoot. However, she has never shot the tournament. I think I will try my hand at that next Friday.

Yesterday some of us went over to the beach, but I didn't get to go swimming for it didn't seem worth the effort. I went wading, anyway, though. Well, I will feel much better when tomorrow has come and gone.

METZ, LAFFOON BEATEN, 3 AND 2

CORAL GABLES, Fla., March 5.—(UP)—Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon, youthful defending champions, fell by the wayside today as firing began at the Miami Biltmore course in the 16th annual $5,000 international fourth tournament.

Metz and Laffoon were driven from the championship list by the veteran team of Johnny Farrell and Willie Klein, who won, 3-2.

Other unexpected victims were Harry Cooper and Jimmy Thompson, who lost, 1 up, in 37 holes to Tony Manero and Lawson Little; Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen, who were beaten, 2 and 1, by Craig Wood and Billy Burke; and Byron Nelson and Frank Walsh, conquered by E. J. (Dutch) Harrison and Ray Mangrum, 4 and 2.

National Open Champion Ralph Guldahl turned in the flashiest golf of the day and set themselves up as the new favorites by handing Frank Moore and Willie Goggin a 6-and-5 licking. They were 10 under par for the distance the match went.

Johnny Revolta and Henry Picard, whose three-year reign was snapped last year by Metz and Laffoon, served notice they were in the running again by trimming Tommy Armour and Tony Fenna, 5 and 4.

"Loved Ones Give Only What We Elicit From Them"—Chatfield

Margaret Sullivan, motion picture star, has a complexion comparable to that which makes English women renowned for their beauty and freshness of appearance.

Basic Beauty Items For English Complexion

By Lillian Mae.

Have you ever wondered why "an English complexion" is something for which to strive? I've decided that the dewy softness of the skin of our sisters across the water is due to the great amount of moisture in the air—less of the drying elements which make up our own climatic conditions.

A cosmetic firm which has for a great many years been supplying English women with beauty aids, is now bending efforts toward bringing to American women those items which will tend to make their complexions as beautiful as those so admired in the English.

A charming assembly of beauty treatment items to develop such complexions is now boxed to sell at a remarkably reasonable price. The assortment represents the basic items for a simple beauty routine planned for normal, oily or dry skin.

The treatment assembly for dry skin contains English lavender soap for cleansing, a very lovely cleansing cream for deep pore cleansing, a night cream that you'll enjoy massaging into your skin, a toning lotion for stimulating, complexion milk for make-up base and a box of English complexion powder in a deep peach shade which is new and flattering to the majority of skins.

For the normal skin—or one that is slightly oily—English complexion cream for deep pore cleansing is substituted, foundation cream for make-up base, and lavender face powder in the same deep peach shade.

But you don't have to worry about these separate items. They come boxed ready for you. Whether your skin is normal, dry or oily, you have only to tell the person from whom you make your purchase, and then you are on your way to a lovelier complexion.

Phone me for the name of this beauty box and I'll tell you where you may purchase it—also where you may consult a specialist in this particular line, who will make suggestions for your own particular skin. If you do not live in the city, write me for this information, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Master Popular Dance Steps At Home

I'm afraid I don't tango very well," Joan murmurs as Ken asks her for a dance.

How a man hates an apology like that, when he expected to whirl around airily with you in the sophisticated new dances—realizes instead he's in for a toe-tangling, weight-dragging time of it.

Yet so lightly, gracefully you could step along to popular rhythms if you'd practice at home with a diagram and instructions. Quickly you could learn the tricky new steps, be sure of yourself when asked to dance.

Why, even the glamorous tango is merely a combination of simple steps. Try the Tango Open Two-Step diagramed above. On Count 1—Step forward on right foot. 2—Step forward on left foot. 3—Step quickly forward on ball of right foot. 4—Step quickly forward on left foot. Pause before repeating.

Other tango steps are as easy—and you soon learn to do them with the smooth panther-like precision that's correct for this romantic dance. Glide smoothly—lifting feet clear off the floor, have little action above the hips, and you'll be perfectly in tune with the deliberate, alluring tango music.

In the same simple way—from footprint diagrams—you can master all the smart dances done by smart people everywhere.

Be proud, not self-conscious about your dancing. Our 40-page booklet, "SOCIAL DANCING SELF-TAUGHT," gives you step-by-step diagrams, instructions for basic steps and variations—in the romantic tango, the tantalizing rumba, the popular Westchester and fox-trot, the graceful waltz, lively shag. Explains correct dancing posture, tells how to lead and follow, puts you among the top-notchers at dances.

Love, Loyalty, Not Obtained By Demand

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

You advise women to cater to men eternally. Are they such babies, so weak mentally and morally that they can't stand on their own feet? The women are expected to be strong and no excuse for their failure. The women don't choose their mates and I think it's a shame and a disgrace to say that as soon as the ceremony is over it's up to them to do the love-making and hold everything in spite of hell and high water. I don't agree.

I think it's a man's business to hold his wife (by love and attention) as it was his pleasure to do before marriage. If we women demanded this, we'd get it, too, as I got it. We women work year in, year out, with no pay, then why should we carry other burdens? It's a lot pleasanter to work in an office with strangers than to stick at home and make things go on with what's handed out.

I say it's time men were made to see that they must grow up and take equal responsibility with their wives for keeping home fires burning. Why should they be handled like toy balloons for fear they will pop? We were all born into this world without a say as to whether we would be mules or men, women or women, cats or dogs, so there's no reason why the men should feel superior because they were born men.

MRS. W. R.

Answer: Sister, you've got me wrong to this extent: I'm not advocating that the courting responsibilities be assumed by wives after marriage but merely the pose that keeps the men in a mood to keep up the courting which means, of course, that everything will be under control.

As for demanding love, loyalty, admiration and respect, it's been my observation that none of it can be got by demanding and this goes for parent and child, husband and wife, friend and friend. Our dear ones give us only what we elicit from them and the gift is as involuntary as the blinking of an eye.

Neither can I get the slant of a wife who resorts to the hour scale to measure what she puts into her home work and resorts to the wage scale to measure what she takes out. That sort of a job may be had in the business world without any responsibility except to pump time clocks and collect pay envelopes, but not in a home where the invested capital is a woman's life in fifty-fifty partnership with her husband; where the dividends are supposed to be spiritual ones: love and happiness.

Mr. Napoleon Hill says "A man's greatest motivating force is his desire to please a woman." I say when he marries, his wife is that woman and whatever she has to do, to keep him in that frame of mind isn't too much, even to handling him like a toy balloon. He's no good to anybody when he's deflated. His wife is the one who suffers most when the balloon pops. So why should she hesitate to keep him puffed up?

Woman's Quiz

Q. How may common jewelry be cleaned?

A. Wash with soap and warm water, rinse in cold water, dip in spirits of any kind and dry in warm boxwood sawdust. Good jewelry needs only to be washed with soap and water and polished with rouge and a chamois leather. Extra care should be taken in cleaning diamond rings, however, as the stones are apt to work loose.

Q. What can be added to meringues to increase their volume?

A. Add either one teaspoon of lemon juice, or one-fourth teaspoon of cream of tartar to three egg whites.

Q. Do moth millers eat fabrics?

A. No, because they have imperfectly formed mouth parts, but they should be destroyed as they lay the eggs which produce the destructive larvae.

Q. What is the correct moisture content of a room during the winter months? How can it be ascertained?

A. It is claimed by physicians and others familiar with the subject, that a certain amount of humidity is necessary to preserve health. A humidity of 45 per cent saturation of the air at 70 degrees Fahrenheit room temperature is considered good from a standpoint of comfort. Humidity can be measured by two instruments, a psychrometer and a hygrometer, which are sold by dealers in scientific instruments. Instructions are furnished with the instruments.

My Day: Difficult to Obtain Patent on Design

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON—There is no doubt about it, I should not stay too long in any one place. Things piled up so yesterday afternoon in New York city that I finally saw three people in a half hour to whom I had expected to give an hour and a half. As a result, I fear that nobody received just what they wanted, but at least I had enough of a picture to tell each one what I could do.

In one case I could do nothing except be appreciative of the lady's ingenuity. She has invented a method of adding to a foundation dress, so that you can have almost any garment you desire with infinite variations. All I could do was to suggest that she see what other people are doing along the same lines, for she expects to apply for a patent, and patents are extremely hard to obtain on anything which is virtually a design.

I visited a friend in the hospital, and at 5 o'clock ended up with a very cheerful tea party which I much enjoyed. It was a good prelude to a pleasant dinner and an excellent background to relieve a well-acted, but extremely disagreeable play. I don't think I ever spent an evening with such disagreeable people as are pictured in "The Little Foxes." Tallulah Bankhead gives a perfectly splendid impersonation of a heartless and ambitious woman. It can't be a very pleasant part. The worst of it is that the greed, avarice and cruelty which stalked naked before us in this play walk the world at all times. I fear, though, as a rule, they are rather more carefully disguised.

I went to the night train and arrived here this morning to find a clear but cold winter day. Yesterday I read the first article which Mr. George Palmer Putnam has written for a magazine about his wife, Amelia Earhart, and I think everyone will enjoy the picture he has painted. He begins with an unforgettable letter. She not only could not bear to be caged, but she could not bear the thought of caging anyone else. So many people want honesty and freedom for themselves, but do not want to accord others the same privilege. Amelia would give just what she wanted to receive.

This morning has been busy and I have attended the District of Columbia League of Women Voters luncheon where the skits, as usual, were very cleverly put on. This year they represented all the different phases of government which are of interest to the women in the District of Columbia.

I am off now for the United States naval air station in Anacostia for the christening of the Pan-American Airways "Yankee Clipper." (Copyright, 1939, for The Constitution.)

How Well Posted Are You On Laws of Contract Bridge?

Are you familiar with the laws of contract bridge?

Take the word of Mrs. Robert A. Smythe, prominent Atlantian, it is well worth the effort to be thoroughly posted.

Mrs. Smythe graciously submitted the following diagram as proof that opponents often profit by the main factor in cases of correct procedure.

South, playing the hand at no-trump, leads dummy's diamond 8.

EAST CLAIMS BALANCE. East plays the diamond 10, and believing it to be the high diamond, spreads her hand on the table, with the announcement:

"My diamond is high. I have the rest of the tricks. Three good hearts and the spade ace."

But South refused to concede, holding the commanding diamond queen and another small diamond. She won the trick and then laid down the small diamond.

LAYS DOWN THE LAW.

Having exposed her cards, East was required by South to play the spade ace to the small diamond.

"Must I play my ace?" East inquired.

"You must," announced South when she cashed the three remaining spades in her own hand.

Later on, Mrs. Smythe investigated her rule book to learn:

PENALTY CARD RULE. 1. From any card placed face up on the table or named by a defender for the purpose of claiming or conceding tricks, becomes a penalty card."

2. "A penalty card must be left face up on the table until played, and whenever it is the turn of the defender who owns it to play (subject to his duty to follow suit). If he has but one penalty card, he must play it; if he has two or more penalty cards, declarer may require him to play any one of them."

"Till tomorrow..."

Don't Let Your Weight Increase With Your Age

By Ida Jean Kain.

Looking at it purely from the insurance brokers' standpoint, it's a tough world. By the time a prospect has made enough money to take out a nice fat policy, he is apt to be so overweight that he is no longer a good risk.

According to reports, the number of large policy buyers has not decreased, but they are less acceptable because of preponderance of degenerative disease. Overeating and underexercising invite fat, and overweight is identified with diabetes, high blood pressure and organic heart diseases.

Dr. H. K. Beall, eminent authority on obesity, says: "In each pound of fat, there are about 4,500 feet of blood vessels, or five-sixths of a mile. Therefore, in 30 pounds of fat, there are about 25 miles of blood vessels through which the heart has to pump blood every five-sixths of a second or less. The organs of a man 150 pounds weight—his heart, lungs and kidneys—are capable of running his machine for a certain time—let us say, 70 years. Suppose this man lets his weight increase to 180 pounds, as most men do who weigh 150. Will he live out his 70 years? Of course, he will not."

When you stop to think about it, you can't help agreeing. A heart that has to pump blood for 25 or more extra miles every five-sixths of a second will certainly give out sooner.

You are not entitled to weigh more as you grow older. The weight tables, as is true, allow for an increase in weight but these tables represent average weights for certain ages, not normal weights. The organs do not increase in weight and any additional poundage represents adipose tissue—and a burden on the heart.

Your normal weight at 30 is your healthiest weight from then on. The average man with medium frame should weigh only two and three-tenths pounds for each inch of height. If you have a large structure, your normal weight may be as much as 10 per cent higher.

Not only is excess weight a health hazard, but it is excess abdominal girth. The beltline should be at least five inches less than the chest measurement. Just the reverse is too often the case!

You have a chance to be healthier and live longer of you keep your weight and your beltline where they belong. The leaflet of "Man-Size Reducing Menu" are balanced at 1,600 to 1,800 calories daily. On these menus you can lose one to two pounds a week. You will also benefit from the exercises given in "Waistlines and Belt Lines," but before you start diet or exercise, have a physical checkover by your doctor.

TODAY'S CHARM TIP

A Cold Is Never Really Just A Cold

By Dr. William Brady.

Fortunately most of the cases in the current outbreak of "flu" turn out to be a good deal less serious than influenza—but you need not tell me how serious even the mildest attack seems to the victim while the attack is on. I know—I had the cri the other day, for the first time in many, many years. And it wasn't only my great embarrassment and sense of frustration that made me carry on so alarmingly and manifest a degree of prostration out of all proportion with the trifling fever, if any, associated with the attack. It was just that I felt that way.

Two things helped to moderate the severity of the attack and speed recovery, I believe. First, the admission last spring by a spokesman for the American Medical Association and the New York Medical Society that "cold is never really just a cold"—a fact I have been for years striving to establish in the mind of the public, the motive, indeed, for my proposal that we cease calling it what it never is, and call it cri like honest folk. Cri (crie) means simply that you assume it is one or another of the common respiratory infections and so you are warning your friends and associates to beware of your conversational spray, for you don't want to infect anybody, no matter what your cri turns out to be.

The other blessing was quinine. In the present epidemic, whether your attack is the genuine influenza or just plain old grip, if you ask me I say you may pin your faith on quinine. Not because it helped me through my little sample visitation of the cri, but because it is, in my opinion, the remedy which the world's physicians universally agree is valuable both as prophylactic against the flu and as a remedy for the attack.

Many physicians believe, and I am one of them, that quinine has special efficacy against the pneumococcus, the germ chiefly responsible for pneumonia and frequently the main factor in cases of acute tonsillitis, quinsy, sinusitis, acute laryngitis (hoarse throat), acute bronchitis, even acute rhinitis or coryza. Moreover an impressive preponderance of clinical reports, statements of experience from physicians in many parts of the world, indicate that quinine has similar efficacy against the bacillus or virus of flu or against both bacillus and virus.

Formerly I suggested combining quinine with salicylate and caffeine, for use against flu or other cri. But the purpose of the salicylate (sodium salicylate or salicylic acid ester otherwise known as aspirin) is only to relieve unbearable ache or pain, so it may not be desirable to repeat the dose of salicylate more than once or twice. The caffeine serves only to stimulate the heart against possible depression by the salicylate. So the caffeine need not be repeated if the salicylate is not repeated.

Now I recommend straight quinine sulphate in one-grain pill, tablet or capsule, two or three times a day throughout the season as prophylactic against flu or the cri, two grains twice, or three times daily for a week or two during an epidemic; three or four grains every three or four hours as a remedy in the attack of flu, grip or cri if you cannot have the attendance of a physician. These doses are for adults. For children one-half of these doses.

A special advantage of quinine against the flu, grip or "colds," as soundbells call the cri, in my opinion, is that it is a safe remedy. If it should fail to prevent or cure the illness at least it can do no harm when used as I have recommended. (Copyright, 1939, for The Constitution.)

Celebrated German Dance Artist To Be Guest at Hecht Residence

By Sally Forth.

WHEN Harold Kreutzberg, the renowned German dancer, and his accompanist, Fritz Wilkins, arrive here on Friday they will be met by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hecht, whose friendship with the celebrated dancer began in Salzburg, Austria. The distinguished visitors will be guests at the Hecht home on Peachtree Battle avenue throughout the week and they will be introduced informally to their hosts' friends during their brief stay here.

On Friday the visitors will motor with Mr. and Mrs. Hecht to Milledgeville for the recital to be presented there at the Georgia State Woman's College on Friday evening by Mr. Kreutzberg. Returning to Atlanta early Saturday the visitors will be shown the interesting sights of which Atlanta is known and tendered a motor drive through the city's suburban sections that boast of beautiful homes and gardens.

Mr. Kreutzberg gives a recital here on Saturday evening at the Erlanger theater after which he and Mr. Wilkins will be honored guests at an informal supper at the Hecht home. The pair leave on Sunday for Havana, where the dancer will give a presentation in the Cuban capital.

NO one's success is more gratifying to Sally Forth than that of Earl Blackwell, who recently launched a brand-new scheme in New York, which he is pleased to call "Celebrity Service." And mind you, it's new and startling even to bored and blasé New Yorkers—this remarkable service that sends out daily bulletins on the goings and comings of the people with important names. The information contained enables one to lunch at "21" and feast his eyes upon the glamour of Gloria Swanson, or attend the same theater as Marlene Dietrich, Robert Taylor or other famous stars. Which, you must admit, is "something."

Under the caption, "New York Newsreel," a recent issue of Reader's Digest carried a brief sketch of Earl's clever idea which he has developed into a workable business. With Earl as his partner, whether he conceived the idea during his residence in Hollywood is not known, but certainly his wide popularity and his contacts with the film colony there have been of great benefit in his new venture. During the several years that he has studied dramatics and played small roles in the movies, there was no more beloved and sought-after figure on the lot than this former Atlantian, whose gracious, kindly manner and magnetic personality have won countless friends. His numbers among his close friends, such as Joan Crawford, Claudette Colbert, Betty Grable, Fredric March, Robert Taylor and Wallace Beery in addition to numerous other notable of the screen world.

However, it is typical of Earl that he gives credit to others for the success of his undertaking. In a recent interview with the New York World-Telegram, he explained it thus: "We are able to do this because we have the full co-operation of press agents, movie studios, theaters, broadcasting companies and air and travel lines."

SALLY hears that Charlotte Woolford, sub-dub daughter of Mrs. Charlotte Boyd Woolford, who attends Madeira School in Washington, D. C., did not have to wait for the spring holidays to return to Atlanta. While participating in a recent athletic event, Charlotte suffered a painful knee injury, which necessitated her return home for medical attention.

The school belle will remain here through the Easter holidays, which terminate on April 1. However, it will be play with Charlotte for her mother has decided that she must continue her studies at home in order to receive the same rating as her classmates when she returns to Madeira. Charlotte will spend her mornings in study, but her afternoons will be far from lonely when her friends call to play a game of bridge or Chinese checkers with the convalescent, whose knee is encased in a plaster cast.

Norton-Hollomon.

RICHLAND, Ga., March 5.—The announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Ann Gurr Norton, of this city, to J. H. Hollomon, of Columbus, which was solemnized January 31. The young couple postponed the announcement of their wedding until they could complete their arrangements for their future home. Mr. Hollomon, formerly of Richland, is employed by the Tom Houston Peanut Company at Columbus.

The bride is the daughter of E. A. Morton and the late Mrs. Morton, of this city, and the groom is a son of Jimmie Hollomon, and the late Mrs. Hollomon, of Richland.

Miss Grace Bowden Becomes Bride of Mr. Cook at Church Rites

Miss Grace Bowden became the bride of Carey G. Cook at a ceremony solemnized yesterday evening at 6 o'clock at the Moreland Avenue Baptist church.

Rev. T. D. Davis officiated before an assemblage of friends of the bridal couple, and Miss Helen Simpson and Mrs. William L. Archer presented a musical program.

The altar was banked with palms and ferns and beautified with cathedral candelabra holding white tapers. Floor baskets of white gladioli completed the effect.

Ushers were Walter Floyd, R. H. Smith, Ralph Jenkins and Frank Reagan Jr. Miss Marcelle Street was the bride's maid of honor and Miss Georgia Mae Clay and Mrs. Henry A. Ware were bridesmaids. They were gowned alike in models of plaid blue chiffon fashioned with draped bodices and full skirts, and featuring belts of peach and blue braided chiffon. Their bouquets were composed of bronze snapdragons and peach gladioli tied with peach satin ribbon.

Little Martha Ann Willard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Willard, and Marce Street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Street, were flower girls. They wore models similar to those worn by the bride's attendants, and carried ribbon-handled plaques adorned with sweet peas and sweetheart roses.

The lovely bride entered with her father, C. Bowden, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Rev. J. W. Leitch, of Millsted.

She wore a white satin wedding gown fashioned along princess lines, the bodice of which featured satin-covered buttons down the front, and long sleeves, pointed over the wrists. Her tulle veil fell from a coronet caught to her hair with orange blossoms, and extended to form a court train. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies.

Mrs. C. Bowden, mother of the bride, wore a model of blue lace made along grecian lines. Her flowers were pink roses.

Mrs. R. H. Street, sister of the bride, was attired in gray lace accented by a cluster of talisman roses.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bowden entertained at a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Street on Woodland avenue. In the dining room the table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake mounted on a plateau of white roses, and flanked by three-branched candelabra containing white tapers.

Misses Louise Malala and Naomi Meyers presided at the wedding. The bride's best man, Agnes Ragdale kept the bride's book. Members of the T. W. Club, of which the bride is a member, assisted in entertaining.

Mr. Cook and his bride left for a wedding trip to Florida. Upon their return they will reside at 149 Gresham road. For traveling the bride wore a navy alpaca model with a boy blue coat and navy accessories. Her shoulder spray was formed of gardenias.

CONTRACTORS, ROAD BUILDERS TURN TO W. C. CAYE & CO.

LATEST EQUIPMENT ROAD MACHINERY HANDLED BY CAYE

Company Is Located in Large Quarters at 787
Windsor St., S. W.

For 12 years W. C. Caye & Company, engaged in handling contractors' equipment and construction machinery as well as engaged in the reinforcing steel business, has kept pace with the growth of this city, and has built for itself a large list of customers all over the state—Georgia being the exclusive territory for the company.

The company is now located at 787 Windsor street, S. W., where it was necessary to move to secure larger quarters some two years ago. It was formerly located on Walker street. But a fast-growing business demanded more room and now its offices and general quarters is located in a large building, with about 10,000 square feet of space, in addition to about two acres of land, where all its reinforcing steel work is handled with power equipment instead of hand labor as it was compelled to do in its former quarters. This gives to the company very large and accommodating quarters to handle more efficiently its stock of steel products, and to give better service in both reinforcing and its equipment business.

Two years ago the company made a very advantageous connection with the nationally known Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, adding another line of road machinery from this large manufacturing concern. This has given to the Caye company a much enlarged service and increased activity in its road machinery line. It has been able through this latest connection to do a great deal more county and city business than Among some of the machinery handled from the connection made two years ago is the Allis-Chalmers tractor, from small wheel type to larger sizes in the crawler type tractors. This line of tractors covers practically every industrial and commercial field.

The company also handles the line of Koehring roller type tower shovels in all sizes, as well as the Koehring paving and construction mixers.

In its line of service to road builders and contractors generally, the company handles all kinds of air compressors and air tools from the Sullivan Machinery Company, of Chicago. This is a well-known and popular line. Garwood scrapers for earth moving are also one of the lines handled by the Caye Company. They are recognized as among the very best pieces of ma-

Black Crow Coal Is Featured By Georgia Coal Co.

Black Crow coal may be just a name, but it signifies one of the best grades of stoker coal, or coal for grate, furnace and heater use on the market today.

Black Crow coal is handled exclusively by the Georgia Coal Company, 420 Peters street, a well and favorably known coal concern, under the management of W. C. Thompson.

"We always use our utmost endeavors to supply our customers with the best coal available," said Mr. Thompson. "We give them the advantage of our long experience in the coal business, and have always tried our best to secure the kind and type of coal we could honestly recommend. That's the reason we took hold of the exclusive sales here of Black Crow coal four years ago. It was, and is, a most unusual product—a coal we think is the most perfect type of fuel for stokers or small home use."

Since the merits of Black Crow coal have become better known through its sales by the Georgia

Showing unloading of Black Crow coal in the yards of Georgia Coal Company, 420 Peters street.

Coal Company, Mr. Thompson declares that sales have largely increased and that his company is now doing a large and most satisfactory business. He stated further that without any exaggeration he could show that more Black Crow stoker coal was used on the market here than any other type of stoker fuel. It is claimed that it has no dust, slate, dirt or rock; that it is perfectly sized and oil treated. It is also claimed to be a non-coking coal, and its low fusing temperature and low ash content make it a popular and ideal coal for domestic stokers. Mr. Thompson states that it is sold on a positive guarantee of satisfaction. Other types of Black Crow coal are just as efficient as the stoker coal, say the dealers. They declare that its high combustible qualities gives intense heat almost instantly. This company has a complete line of this popular brand of coal, sized perfectly to fit every requirement, and a closed draft will insure a fire overnight.

Moore, Inc., has found it necessary to expand its office headquarters since beginning business only three months ago. It is now located in suite 2001 on the 20th floor of the Rhodes-Haverty building, where the concern is equipped to render friendly and a most efficient insurance service.

No little amount of credit can be given the personnel of this organization. It is composed of a group of well and favorably known young businessmen. Its officers and employees include Wiley L. Moore Jr., president, who is widely known in Atlanta and the southeast as an executive and civic leader. He was formerly president of M. & A. Motor Freight Lines, operating between Atlanta and New Orleans. He is the present vice president of the Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce. W. P. Moore, vice president of Moore, Inc., is president of the M. & A. Motor Freight Lines and president of the Georgia Truckers' Association. James C. Moore, secretary-treasurer of the firm, is a widely known young businessman. All of the Moors are sons of Wiley L. Moore, a popular business and civic leader of this city and section.

J. Verlyn Booth, vice president and general manager, is a prominent attorney and former member of the general assembly of Georgia from Barrow county. Prior to coming to Atlanta to organize Moore, Inc., he was actively engaged in the general practice of law at Winder, Ga. James A. Lofton, manager of the insurance department, is one of the best known young insurance executives to be found in the insurance field. He is familiar with all types of insurance and is equipped to handle any insurance problem that might arise. He was formerly connected in an executive capacity with one of the largest insurance companies doing business in this country. J. G. Shankle, who is widely known in business and civic circles, is a member of the agency force, and is the accountant and auditor for the new firm. He was formerly connected with the National Cash Register Company as office manager and sales representative. He is the present secretary-treasurer of Tammany Club of Atlanta.

The insurance companies represented by this new organization are old-line companies whose financial stability are unquestioned. It is predicted that this new firm will grow into one of the greatest of its kind in the field.

TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 7

"A lion and a leopard," Tarzan repeated, "stalking human prey. We'll take to the trees. We can see better from above. Here, I'll carry you." Swinging D'Arnot to a broad shoulder, the ape-man climbed swiftly into the trees and headed toward the ominous sound.

They arrived just as Perry O'Rourke fired at the leopard menacing him from above. They saw the wounded beast, screaming with rage, leap down upon his victim and fall with him to the ground. And in the trail they saw the lion crouch to charge at the helpless man.

Tarzan and D'Arnot dropped down through the trees with dizzy speed and landed in the jungle trail. D'Arnot leapt the ape-man's back and hastily unsling his rifle, to face the infuriated leopard. And now, with an ear-splitting roar, the lion charged down on O'Rourke.

With a mighty bound Tarzan leaped over the confused Perry and landed in the path between him and the on-rushing carnivore. His deep voice boomed a fearless challenge. But the lion did not hesitate. This new victim would satisfy hunger as well as the other.
